Brookline "Sheik" Spent $7,000 Freely Shortly After Robbery in Boston

Roxbury police have wired for details concerning the arrest at Albany, N. Y., of James G. Lundy, alias "The Sheik," a Brookline youth wanted in New Brunswick, N. J., for defaulting $15,000 bail two years ago on the charge of engineering a $38,000 silk robbery. He also faces a homicide charge.

The police also know him under aliases of Jimmie Kelly, Joseph Boston and John O'Neil.

The "Sheik," when arrested by Detective Gieselbrecht, carried evidence which shows that he spent nearly $7,500 during his short stay in Albany. One thousand dollars more, set aside as a reserve fund, is being cared for by a woman friend, according to the police.

Six days ago, Peter A. Geddis, assistant cashier and paymaster of the New England Telephone Company, Boston, was robbed of payroll money amounting to $20,200. It happened amidst a traffic jam at Allerton and Lansdowne streets, Roxbury, at 1:45 p. m. The bandits stepped into a limousine and made their getaway.

Price of Sugar Hits New High Mark at Refineries

A new high mark in the price of sugar was reached today. The American and Revere Sugar Refineries announced a price of $9.40 a hundred pounds, an advance of 15 cents.

The retail price has been 10¼ cents a pound for small lots, and 10 cents for large amounts for a week. There was no advance today, but large retail dealers reported a noticeable increase in sugar sales.

The refiners again asserted that there is plenty of sugar arriving at American ports and would give no reason for the latest advance other than the increase in producers' prices.

CUBAN SUGAR CROP BELOW ESTIMATE

Havana, April 12.—Twenty-two of the numerous sugar centrals in Cuba have finished cane grinding for the season, with a production of 1,237,944 bags of sugar, against an estimate made by H. A. Himley of the Federal Sugar Company of 1,783,000 bags. The opinion seems to prevail that the total crop will not exceed 3,700,000 tons.

MACHINE SHOP IN SO. SUDBURY BURNED

South Sudbury, April 12.—Damage amounting to $25,000 was caused when the two wooden structures occupied by the Hulbert & Rogers Machine Company were burned to the ground early today. The fire started in the power room. The two buildings are owned by A. H. Macbriar of Hudson. Citizens of Sudbury rushed water from a nearby stream with buckets and handpumps. Later the Marlboro fire department sent a detachment to the scene and it was able to save adjacent property. One fireman was badly burned by an explosion of oil barrels.

London, April 12 (By International News Service)—Countess Markiewicz, Count Plunkett, Miss MacSwiney and a brother of the late Liam Lynch, all influential Irish Republican leaders, have been captured by Free State troops near the border of Tipperary County, according to a report from Clonmel this afternoon

It is also stated that Count Plunkett, Mrs. O'Callaghan, widow of the Lord Mayor of Limerick, and the brother of Liam Lynch, who is a member of the Christian Brothers Order, were arrested at the same time and place, but that Lynch later was released.

Beeckman Sees French Economic Victory in the Ruhr

New York, April 12.—The French occupation of the Ruhr Valley is an economic success, R. Livingston Beeckman, former Governor of Rhode Island, declared when he arrived today on the Homeric, after a three-months' trip through Europe.

"European opinion was divided over the occupation three months ago," Mr. Beeckman said, "but before I left Europe I believe that more than 80 per cent. of the population favored the occupation. France had to take the bull by the horns for her own safety."

GIRL SMASHES FIFTY-HOUR DANCE RECORD

Cleveland, April 12.—Miss Helene Mayer, twenty-one, a department store saleagirl, at noon today had established a new record of continuous dancing of fifty hours and twenty-five minutes, and was still dancing. She said she expected to continue until 4 p. m.

Starting at 9:35 a. m. Tuesday morning, she equalled the record of fifty hours and two minutes established in New York last Monday by Miss Alma Cummings, at 11:37 a. m. today, and at noon was twenty-three minutes ahead of the record. She had used six male partners up to noon.

Two other girls who started several hours after Miss Mayer, dropped out of the dancing this morning after having passed the twenty-eight-hour mark.

MRS. PRINCE AND THAYER SAIL HOME

They May Come on Same Boats All Deny They Eloped and Married

Two brunettes and the sailing list for the liner Paris from France to New York next Saturday put new complications today in the guessing contest on the Thayer-Prince romance.

Mrs. Elizabeth Harding Prince of Boston, who has just divorced Frederick H. Prince, Jr., in Paris, sails for New York Saturday on the French liner Paris.

Her father, Governor W. P. G. Harding of the Boston Federal Reserve Bank, declared today that his daughter has not married Eugene V. R. Thayer, who has just been divorced by Mrs. Gladys Baldwin Brooks Thayer.

But Paris cables today quoted Mr. Thayer as saying that he was sailing Saturday for New York. Presumably he will also be a passenger on the Paris, the same liner on which Mrs. Prince will sail.

Mr. Thayer denied that he has married Mrs. Thayer. But he refused to say he had no intention of so doing.

"TWO BRUNETTES."

Their choice of the same liner for the homeward voyage may be construed by friends on this side as strong indication that romance does flourish between the two.

But Mr. Thayer, the Paris cable adds, gave a theatre party Tuesday night at a charity boxing exhibition in Paris.

Two brunettes were his companions among his guests. Mrs. Prince is no brunette, but a beautiful blonde. Nor was she among the Thayer guests at all.

Those on the "No" side of the romance question may argue that, if

Bar Germans in Olympic Games

Rome, April 12 (By the Associated Press)—The International Olympic Committee decided today that it would be inopportune to invite Germans to take part in the Olympic games at Paris next year. The request from the Russian expatriates that they be admitted to the games as a separate entity, distinct from any team from Soviet Russia, was denied.

CARTER NOT ILL, SAYS CAIRO DISPATCH

London, April 12 (By Associated Press).—There is no truth in the report that Howard Carter, the American Egyptologist, co-discoverer with the late Lord Carnarvon of the tomb of Tutenkhamun, has been taken ill, says a Reuter dispatch from Cairo today.

Carter, it asserts, will shortly return from Cairo to Luxor.

An Exchange Telegraph message from Cairo last night said Carter had been stricken with illness there and that Lady Carnarvon in consequence had postponed her trip to England with her husband's body.

DEATH CHASES DOG TO ANOTHER STATE

Fitchburg, April 12.—Death sentence is pursuing Augustus A. Wood's dog across the State line to Batavia, N. Y. Repeated complaint had been made of the dog biting children. Wood was told to keep the dog in his yard at No. 18 Arlington street. More complaint came. Judge Gallagher instructed him to have the dog killed.

"The dog's in Batavia, N. Y., now," said Wood. The court gave Wood a week to see that the dog died. The police of Batavia have been asked to seek the dog at the address given by Wood and kill it.

RAID 'VEIL DANCE'; 250 SEIZED

Wild Scramble for Exits as Police Swoop down on N. Y. Revellers

New York, April 12.—Three hundred male members and guests of the Twentieth Assembly District Republican Club in Brooklyn found one narrow door that led to a vacant lot and a back fence too small to pour through when the police raided their room today to stop an exhibition dance by five women said to be too improperly clad.

Two hundred and fifty of the men and the five women were taken to jail.

The "Dance of the Seven Veils," in which the dancers discarded the veils one by one, and the "Little Egypt" dance were roundly applauded, according to detectives, who said they had witnessed the entire performance.

The raid created intense excitement in the residential neighborhood. Twenty patrol wagons took the prisoners to nine different police stations.

CONCORD SLAYER KNOWN

O'Brien, Boston Gunman, Is Sought by Police for Killing Automobile Dealer

The police are aware of the identity of the Boston gunman known as "O'Brien," who murdered Vernon F. Atkins, Concord automobile dealer, and escaped.

Francis L. Henning of Charlestown, under arrest in connection with the killing, will be arraigned this afternoon on a charge of manslaughter. Meantime an army of policemen are on the watch for O'Brien, who did the shooting. He is well known to the police as a gunman, bootlegger and gambler.

His haunts in South Boston are being watched.

O'Brien and Henning were both hangers-on in a pool room on Washington street. It was in this pool-room some time ago that O'Brien was arrested on a larceny charge. Henning was the man who furnished the bail for O'Brien on that occasion.

The police do not believe Henning's story of his chance acquaintance with O'Brien, nor his flimsy

USES OIL ON FIRE, WOMAN DIES

Springfield, April 12.—An explosion of a can of kerosene, which she was using to start a fire in the kitchen range, resulted today in the fatal burning of Miss Nancy Holbrook, seventy-six years old, of Monson. Her clothes ablaze, she was found unconscious on the floor by William Boyden, who beat out the flames with a rug.

And this little experience reveals the attitude of the Boylston National to all its customers. That young men will be a real executive some day and when he is, we know that he will continue to bank with us.

HUNT FOR BOSTON GUNMAN FOLLOWS CONCORD, N. H., MURDER

WIFE ATTACKED.

Atkins, together with his wife and son, were at dinner when the men arrived at the house. Mrs. Atkins answered the door. When one of the men leveled a pistol at her, she screamed. She was seized and choked by Henning, who attempted to silence her.

Brushing past her, the two men confronted Atkins and his son. The gunman covered the door. When one of the men leveled a pistol at him, shouting, "Hands up! If you try to get away I'll shoot you."

Atkins made a dash for a rear door and was shot down as he reached the yard. He fell twenty feet from the house.

YOUTH FOLLOWS.

Reginald, sixteen years old, Atkins' son, grappled with the two men when they tried to follow Atkins through the rear door. Breaking away, Henning and the slayer disappeared in the darkness, young Atkins following.

The slayer was lost to sight, but Reginald followed Henning to the Auditorium Theatre in the City Hall Building, where he notified the police in time to catch the fugitive as he emerged from a side exit.

City Marshal George A. S. Kimball today announced the finding of the gun used by the slayer beside the road at Centre and Hanover streets, which is the course taken by the slayer when he rushed from the Atkins home after the crime was committed.

Henning was recognized by police as one of two brothers caught on Daniel Webster Highway, March 1921, in connection with running rum from Canada. The brothers were captured when a flat tire forced them to halt.

PAID THEIR FINES.

At the time of their arrest, Atkins furnished bail and later paid their fines and redeemed the automobile, a new one, which they had used to haul whiskey. He has since kept the car in his possession.

According to Henning, the brothers thought Atkins got the car too cheap, and that they were being cheated. He declared the man who did the shooting is not his brother, Andrew, who is now working in Washington, D. C.

MEET IN BOSTON.

The slayer, known to Henning as O'Brien and Riley, met Henning in a pool room on Washington street Boston, last Monday. When Henning told his hard luck story, O'Brien sympathized with him, and agreed to accompany him to Concord to get the car. Two Boston & Maine railroad rebate checks tend to substantiate this story.

Throughout the quizzing of Henning by police officials, he appeared to be dazed, and articulated with difficulty. It was difficult for him to keep his mind on the questions asked him. Police believe he was under the influence of narcotics.

Descriptions of the slayer were broadcasted by radio and by the usual methods. He is about thirty-two years old, 5 feet 7 inches tall, 150 to 155 pounds, clean shaven and dark complected. He wore a blue serge suit, light mixed overcoat and tan shoes.

ATKINS WIDELY KNOWN.

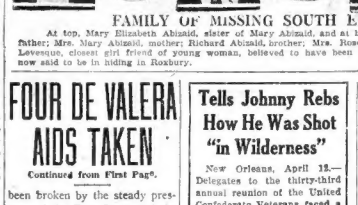
Atkins was widely known among sporting men throughout New England. He was a brother-in-law of ex-Mayor Charles J. French, and had been a resident of Concord since boyhood.

Prior to the enactment of the prohibition amendment he was a partner of the late Loren E. Currier in the operation of a saloon on Depot street, an establishment noted as a rendezvous for horsemen and race track men. He has since been in the automobile accessory business in partnership with former Warden Charles H. Rowe of the New Hampshire State Penitentiary.

Numerous suspects were arrested in Concord, Manchester and other cities, but were released when they established alibis.

A hotel guest Derry, N. H., was arrested and h by Chief of Police Grant for several hours until a more accurate description of the gunman was obtained. He was released at 6 o'clock this morning, when Concord police failed to identify him.

JOIN IN HUNT FOR ELOPING COUPLE



FAMILY OF MISSING SOUTH END GIRL

At top, Mary Elizabeth Abinaid, sister of Mary Abinaid, and at bottom, left to right, L. G. Abinaid, father; Mrs. Mary Abinaid, mother; Richard Abinaid, brother; Mrs. Rose Bourgailly, sister, and Maleda Levesque, closest girl friend of young woman, believed to have been abducted by Philip Abdenon, and now said to be in hiding in Roxbury.

MISSING GIRL HIDING IN ROXBURY

Mary Abinaid, South End girl, who has been missing from her home for several days, and her alleged abductor, Philip Abdesour, are being harbored by friends in Roxbury, according to the girl's father, L. G. Abinaid, glove manufacturer who is sparing no effort to recover his missing daughter.

After he had been informed by a friend that the eloping couple had been seen at the home of Abdenour's sister in West Roxbury, Abinaid went to the address with two plain clothes policemen, only to find that the pair had flown.

DENIES VISIT.

Abdenour's sister denied that the couple had visited her house. She said, however, is confident that his daughter and Abdenour had been at the house and had fled when they learned of his approach. The two are now with other friends in Roxbury, the manufacturer said. He also declared that he will continue the search until the elopers are caught.

Hoping to furnish a clue to the whereabouts of the missing couple, Mrs. Mary Hall, proprietor of a lodging house on Waltham street, supplied the manufacturer with the information that a couple answering

$90,000 IN RUM SECRETED IN CAMBRIDGE

Federal prohibition agents and the local police were today searching Cambridge for liquor valued at $90,000, which they believe has been stored in the city by the rum-running ring which operated the lighter John Dwight, sunk by an explosion off Vineyard Sound, two schooners and a fleet of automobiles.

The wealthy Cambridge man and his assistant, who are suspected of being the leaders of the ring, have been missing since the sinking of the John Dwight with the loss of at least eight of her crew. A Dorchester druggist is involved with the pair by the police.

CAMBRIDGE HEADQUARTERS.

Another Cambridge man has been identified as a victim of the rum ship explosion. He was James A. Cronan of No. 283 Massachusetts avenue, and his identification by a brother from New York lends more confirmation to the statement of one of the survivors, also a Cambridge man, that the headquarters of the ring is in Cambridge.

The two Cambridge leaders have been active in politics and one of them has been arrested on several occasions. Information furnished the police was that their automobiles were of a make noted for speed.

Daniel J. Murphy and John Anderson, the two other Cambridge victims of the explosion, had been constantly employed by the pair, it was stated.

Thousands of Dollars Go With Missing Captain

Vineyard Haven, April 12.—Only one of the eight known victims of the sinking of the rum ship John Dwight remains unidentified here today.

The seventh identification was that of the body of James A. Cronan of Cambridge by his brother, Martin J. Cronan of New York city. Martin Cronan was also seeking traces of the two missing captains of the John Dwight, who disappeared after the explosion. They are Malcolm John Carmichael and John King.

Cronan had been commissioned to search for Carmichael by a Captain Peterson of New York, who said that he knew Captain Carmichael had been on the rum ship, and that the missing man was an intimate friend of James A. Cronan. On Cronan's body was found a list of the late quotations of ales and wines of a Halifax firm.

Captain Carmichael is believed to have carried thousands of dollars to finance the expedition of the John Dwight.

MRS. PRINCE TO SAIL FOR HOME

Mr. Thayer and Mrs. Prince were engaged. It would be most natural for Mr. Thayer to have the blonde Mrs. Thayer at his boxing party and not two brunettes, no matter how charming.

It was also said in the Paris cables that Mrs. Prince's chief grievance against her former husband was that he insisted on crossing to Europe twice a year to be with his father as leader of the hounds at Pau.

PREFERRED AMERICA.

Mrs. Prince insisted that, as a good American, her place was inside American frontiers. Mr. Prince, Jr., refused to meet her views, thus providing an abandonment clause under which the divorce was granted to Mrs. Prince at Paris, the same day that Mrs. Thayer obtained her divorce.

Mr. Thayer's latest statement in Paris on the fretted romance question is:

"I have not married or eloped with Mrs. Prince or anyone else. I am sailing at the end of this week for home. That is all I have to say."

This statement has been interpreted in Paris as an indication that he and Mrs. Prince plan to marry as soon as they arrive on this side of the Atlantic, or possibly after the expiration of the sixty-day period stipulated by the French courts for re-marriage of divorced persons.

COMING TO BOSTON.

Mr. Harding, father of Mrs. Prince, said today:

"I received a cable from my daughter in Paris that she was sail ing Saturday on the Paris for New York. She is coming to Boston to live with me. She has not been married. I have taken a house at No. 371 Beacon street and it is now being furnished and fixed up. My daughter will make her home with me there."

rounded up since that time. All, however, were later released. Theories as to who the men might be and from whence they came, have changed almost hourly. The latest, however, advanced the idea that a New York man slipped in, did the job, and hustled out of Boston.

Lundy now looms up as another suspect.

Lundy, at present, is complained of for holding up and robbing Frank Moran, cashier for Candee, Smith & Howland, New York, who on January 19 was held up and robbed of the contracting concern's $810 payroll.

He is also charged with homicide, the machine in which he is reported to have made his escape having struck and killed eight-year-old Alice Hocker of No. 321 East 26th street.

Lundy denied that he had anything to do with the kidnaping of Miss Esther Korn, seventeen years old, of No. 104 East Eighty-first street. She disappeared after having withdrawn a small account from the savings bank.

The girl, now at home, told a thrilling story of having been kidnaped and held captive by bandits

Detective Gissedbrecht claims that the girl wrote letters to Lundy at his father's home in Brookline Another letter was sent by Miss Korn to James Kelly of Albany, where the girl was finally located.

RECIPIENT OF KLAN NOTE GETS 2 GUNS

Hammonton, N. J., April 12.—After being threatened in a letter signed "K. K. K." Edward D. Meyers of Pitman appealed to Mayor J. M. McGowan of that place for advice and protection. McGowan told Meyers to pack a pistol in each pocket and let the other fellow worry. The latter accepted the Mayor's advice.

FOUR DE VALERA AIDS TAKEN

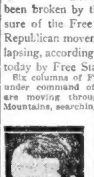
been broken by the steady pressure of the Free State, and the Republican movement is fast collapsing, according to claims made today by Free State officials.

Six columns of Free State troops, under command of General Prout, are moving through the Clonmel Mountains, searching every nook and cranny for the hiding places of De Valera, Dan Breen, Countess Markiewicz and their handful of Republican followers.



Liam Lynch.

While the report of De Valera's capture on Wednesday proved untrue, the general opinion is that he cannot remain at liberty much longer.

Thomas Keating, one of the Southern Republican leaders, died today from his wounds in the Dungarvan Hospital. Keating, with a party of Republicans, was surprised by troops operating at Coolnamuar, near Dungarvan, County Waterford. The Republicans refused to surrender and were fired upon, Keating receiving a mortal wound.

Free State officials declared the iron policy of repression would not be relinquished until all the Republican leaders had been rounded up. Large numbers of Republicans are giving up their arms. Districts that have been the seat of guerilla warfare for many months are becoming tranquil.

Seized Irish Papers Show Moylan Attacked U. S.

Dublin, April 12.—The Free State government publishes further captured correspondence, including a report sent to Liam Lynch, late chief of staff of the Republicans, by his principal lieutenant, saying:

"From the latest note from Sean Moylan (then in New York) to the office commanding in Great Britain, Americans will not be too thankful to Moylan; it is derogatory to all things American and in America."

Tells Johnny Rebs How He Was Shot "in Wilderness"

New Orleans, April 12.—Delegates to the thirty-third annual reunion of the United Confederate Veterans faced a busy program when they assembled today.

In attendance are a number of ante bellum negroes, who still recount stories of their "white folks" of those days. Of the Confederate leader, General Robert E. Lee, one spoke thus:

"An' when Marse Robert went ridin' along on his big boss in front uv de battle line an' saw me side him, he yells: "'Git away fum dis firin' line, William, an' git back on de animal line. Fust think you know you'll git shot an' I won't have any cook.' An' sho nuf, I gets shot a minute after that, right in de wilderness, too."

The talker was Rev. William Mack Lee of Norfolk, Va., who was body servant and cook for the Confederate chieftain.

FINDS NEWSPAPERS MOST EFFECTIVE

Philadelphia, April 12.—Philip H. Dadaden, president of the Eastern States Gas Conference, in an address before the annual meeting of that body, declared that the most effective medium of publicity was the public press.

"A settled policy of continuous publicity through paid for space in the daily press, and through an informed and keenly interested body of employes, is what gas companies and all other utilities need to bring about that cordial and systematic relationship with the public which is essential to their success," he said.

BEATING CAUSES ATTENDANT'S ARREST

Worcester, April 12.—William J. McBride, a patient in the Worcester State Hospital, suffered abrasions of the forehead and injuries to the jaw and ribs, at the hands of Charles J. Rice, a hospital attendant. Rice is under arrest.

the description of the missing pair and sought to engage a room at her house last Saturday. The man, she said, had informed her the two were about to be married. The landlady said she had refused to let them the desired room.

MOTHER GRIEF STRICKEN.

Relatives of the missing girl have received no word from her since her mysterious telephone call to her chum, Maleda Levesque, when she had cried over the wire: "I am being held prisoner." The call was on that occasion interrupted before the girl could divulge her whereabouts.

Mrs. Mary Abinaid, mother of the missing girl, is grief stricken over her absence. The girl's brother, Richard, and her two sisters, Elizabeth, and Mrs. Rose Bourgailly, are bitter against the man who is alleged to have abducted their sister, and are doing everything possible to aid in effecting her rescue.

WOMEN ASK NAVY TO FIGHT BOOTLEGGERS

The North Cambridge Federation of Women's Church Societies has sent a letter to President Harding asking that the navy be sent out at once against the rum-runners. They also sent a letter to Assistant District Attorney Robert P. Bushnell of Middlesex County, thanking him for asking for a jail sentence for a bootlegger last week. The letter is signed by Mrs. A. N. MacKechnie, Mrs. J. C. Tebbets, Mrs. F. M. French, Mrs. George E. Hutchins, Mrs. M. M. Comstock, Mrs. J. A. Stinson, Mrs. H. L. Grover, Mrs. M. D. Wolfe, Mrs. E. H. Green, Mrs. F. D. Hurley, Mrs. E. W. Russell and Miss Louise Barker.

TROLLEY CAR HITS DORCHESTER MAN

Struck by an outbound trolley car at Franklin Park, Frank Dumas, fifty-five years old, of No. 72 Village street, Dorchester, was removed to the City Hospital. It is feared he has a fractured skull.

New York—Mgr. John Francis Kearney, rector of St. Patrick's Pro-Cathedral, is dead. He was 55 years old and had been assistant rector and rector since 1896.

CONVENTION FAVORS SPORTS FOR WOMEN

Springfield, April 12.—President Carl L. Schrader of the American Physical Education Association, which today began the business sessions of its thirtieth annual convention, here, said the convention will devote much attention to athletics for women. He pointed out that numerous committees from many parts of the country are here to confer on problems involved.

President Schrader emphasized the desirability of modest costumes among women when appearing in public.

The convention is being attended by 1,500 physical educators.

WOMAN IN HOSPITAL UNDER WRONG NAME

Found unconscious in a doorway at No. 24 Broadway, South Boston, Mrs. Elizabeth Brines was booked at the City Hospital as Mrs. Mary J. Frye of Manchester, N. H., and Logan avenue, Medford. Letters addressed to Mrs. Frye were found in the other woman's handbag. The letters had been given to Mrs. Brines in connection with real estate deals. Through the error, friends of Mrs. Frye in Manchester and Boston were led to believe she was the victim of an accident.

SAYS SUNDAY SCHOOL USEFULNESS IS PAST

Omaha, April 12 (By Associated Press)—The Sunday school has outlived its usefulness, Rev. Dr. William E. Gardner, executive secretary of the department of religious education of the Protestant Episcopal Church, said today opening the annual conference of educational leaders of the denomination. Boys and girls growing up today will not carry on the religious controls of the past for they are looking at religion from a new angle, he said.

Republicans, Remember Ford
China Drinks Milk
Fighting in the Commons
Who Is Sane?

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1923, Star Co.

THE PUBLIC reads with pleasure that the President's views on the League of Nations are unchanged. For in that case, he is opposed to the League of Nations, as he was when he denounced the League a while ago, promised to keep this country out of it, and was elected with seven million votes to spare.

The President is understood to have said he doesn't believe that going into the world court means going into the League.

Lord Robert Cecil has made the positive statement that the world court is a part of the League of Nations and Lord Robert ought to know. When the United States becomes part of the world court, it becomes "part of a part" of the League of Nations.

IF PRESIDENT HARDING finds himself running for the presidency, as he probably will, and finds himself saddled with a third or fourth class membership in the League of Nations, it will be embarrassing for him if Henry Ford, as independent or Democratic candidate, comes out and says: "I think the United States is able to attend to its own affairs and needs neither advice nor assistance from Europe."

THAT'S WHAT Ford probably will say. He had a definite answer for Wall Street when they tried to help him run his business. He told the representatives of high finance "There's the door, walk out," and just then he needed sixty millions. If he were President of the United States, Ford wouldn't feel the need of anybody from Europe to help him run United States business, any more than he felt the need of Wall Street to help run his own business.

THE MOTHERS of China now give cow's milk to their babies when they can get it, in spite of the ancient law.

An Empress of old days, seeing a calf crying beside its mother while a woman milked the mother, felt sorry for the calf, and said "No more milk drinking. It is unjust to take the cow's milk from the cow's child."

IN THE Empress' ruling there seemed to be wisdom and justice combined. It was surely just to let the cow's child have the cow's milk. It was wise because it would prevent premature killing of calves. Letting calves grow up would supply more beef.

ON THE other hand, that "kind-hearted" Empress has caused the death of millions of Chinese babies. Chinese mothers unable to nurse the baby give the infant rice and water. After a certain time the baby dies.

THERE IS creaking and a rattle in the English lawmaking machine. Day before yesterday the Labor party, by a clever manoeuvre, defeated the Tory government, which declined to resign. Yesterday a free-for-all fight disgraced the House of Commons, honorable members punching each other's noses.

America is represented in this British restlessness by Lady Astor, recently of Virginia, now of the House of Commons. She called another honorable member "a village donkey." You can't blame her, as that donkey had opposed her bill to forbid selling alcohol drinks to minors.

FOUR PATIENTS escaped from the Asylum for the Criminal Insane. Three were captured, one desperately wounded. The fourth, late yesterday, was hiding in the woods. The maniacs ran desperate risks to regain their "liberty," although their minds made any real freedom impossible for them.

We who call ourselves sane, know that the best thing for the four unfortunate men would have been to remain where they were, controlled and in prison.

We reach that conclusion easily. It is not so easy for us to realize that it is probably the best thing for us also, because of our mental limitations, to be imprisoned and kept from free-

HUB DANCER OUT TO SMASH RECORDS

EDMUND CURRAN AND MISS BOYLE

Dancing partners are being sought for Edmund Curran, who, at 6 o'clock Monday evening, will undertake to shatter all standing Marathon dance records, including the record recently established by Miss Alma Cummings of Texas, when she danced for fifty hours in a New York dance hall, exhausting seven male partners in establishing the record.

The Marathon will take place in William H. O'Brien's dancing academy at No. 295 Huntington avenue, Back Bay. Of the half dozen partners being selected from among the women instructors at Roseland, Miss Mary A. Boyle has been chosen to start the dance with Curran.

FOUR ESCAPED PRISONERS ARE RECAPTURED

Matteawan, N. Y., April 12.—Four inmates of the Matteawan State Hospital for the Criminal Insane, who made a dash for liberty yesterday, were in custody again today, after an exciting chase and gun battle across the State line in Connecticut.

Two of them, wounded in a gun fight with pursuing posses near Kent, Ct., were taken to a Poughkeepsie hospital. The others, surrendering to Connecticut authorities after their companions were shot down, were turned over to New York State troopers and brought back here.

The wounded men are John Hawkins of New York, convicted of murder, and Frank James, twenty-two, of Brooklyn, convicted of burglary. Both have bullet wounds in their legs. The men who surrendered are Marquis Curtis, forty-seven, convicted of possessing explosives and fire arms, and John Coffey, twenty-five of New York, convicted of grand larceny.

HIGHER PAY OR STRIKE BY COAL TEAMSTERS

Officials of the Coal Exchange, No. 141 Milk street, today admitted having received a telephone notice that the 1,000 members of Coal Teamsters' Union No. 68 would strike at once unless a wage increase of $3 a week was granted by the employers.

The conference committee of the union, at a meeting in Paine Memorial Hall last night, decided to send an ultimatum to the dealers.

While the teamsters' officers refused to make any statement, it was hinted that the strike would come inside twenty-four hours unless the employers accede.

The men have rejected a compromise offer of $2 a week increase and have also refused to let the league go before an arbitration board.

MUST BUY FOOD FROM LANDLORD

Holyoke, April 12.—Methods of West Virginia and western Pennsylvania mining towns are employed by a Fourth Ward landlord, who in addition to requiring that his tenants pay their rent regularly, has stipulated that they must buy their groceries from his store or vacate their homes.

There is no kick on the grocery store, it is understood. It is reported to carry a fine line of groceries. But rather than be compelled to deal there, some tenants have voluntarily rented houses elsewhere. Several families in his block, it is said, have been asked to deal with the store, or vacate. The landlord says he can easily find tenants who will become customers of his store.

Lexington, Ky., April 12.—Warren Middleton of Paducah, Ky., a student at the University of Kentucky, tried on a charge of murder in connection with the slaying of Joseph Self, night watchman at the university, was acquitted by a jury in Circuit Court here. The jury deliberated for forty minutes.

MATHILDE READY TO WED OSER

Swiss Suitor Has Permission of Heiress' Father; Early Marriage Now Expected

By International News Service.

Basle, Switzerland, April 12.—Major Max Oser, middle-aged Swiss riding master, who is engaged to Miss Mathilde McCormick, eighteen-year-old granddaughter of John D. Rockefeller, is carrying in his pocket a sworn legal document signed by Harold F. McCormick of Chicago, the girl's father, consenting to her marriage to Oser, according to an exclusive statement made to International News Service today by William Christ, Oser's closest friend.

Christ's statement has deepened the mystery about the romance of the pretty young American girl and her Swiss suitor, who is old enough to be her father.

It had been reported that Mathilde and her traveling companion, Miss Julia Mangold, had spent the Winter in London, waiting patiently until Miss McCormick should become of age so she could marry without the need of parental consent. She attained her eighteenth birthday last Saturday.

One of the many rumors is that Miss McCormick and Major Oser were really married several months ago and are now traveling about Europe on their honeymoon.

Christ said he did not believe that Oser is in Switzerland.

"Major Oser always stays at my home when he is in Basle, and if he were in Switzerland I believe he would be in Basle," he said. "I have every reason to believe the marriage will take place soon. But I do not know where it will be."

APPEAL TO DUNN TO RUN FOR RE-ELECTION

Leaders of the Massachusetts Veterans of Foreign Wars are appealing to Brigadier General John H. Dunn, Soldiers' Relief Commissioner of Boston to run again for State commander of the organization. The election will be held in June at the State encampment. There is a strong feeling that General Dunn, the present commander, should continue in office, because of his remarkable achievements in building up the organization this past year. Eugene Carver of Georgetown Dilboy Post of Somerville is mentioned as a candidate in case General Dunn will not agree to be a candidate.

COX DENOUNCES SOVIET CRUELTY

Governor Cox, in his speech before the G. A. R. Encampment in Kingsley Hall, condemned the Soviet government for its cruel and wanton destruction of Christians and called upon all American citizens to banish Soviet ideas. "Stand up for this republic of America, the freest, noblest republic on earth, where if any one is a true citizen revolution will not be tolerated," said Governor Cox.

SAFE FRAUD CASE IS FOUGHT

Promoters Spending Huge Sums to Prevent Extradition to This State

A wall of money is being built to protect Mennotti Nanni and Guiseppi Mammini of the Ocean Floating Safe Company from the vengeance of Boston's Italian North End.

The highest-priced attorneys of Illinois either have been engaged or are being sought to save the two men from being brought here to face trial on charges of fraud and, perhaps, the stiletto.

Assistant District Attorney Robert Robinson is in Springfield, Ill., appealing to Governor Small to honor the extradition warrant signed by Governor Cox. He will engage talented counsel to help him bring the fugitives back.

"The inventors" have allied a powerful group. They are making a desperate fight. Money is literally being flung away to save the pair, according to reports reaching District Attorney O'Brien. The case is to be heard in Illinois on April 17.

Nanni and Mammini, back in 1920 demonstrated the qualities of the non-sinkable safe in the harbor off North End Park. Thousands of their country-men watched breathless as Nanni was lowered into the water and they cheered lustily when he reappeared.

The sale of stock started immediately. Thousands of dollars were scooped in by the promoters. The Italians drew their savings, entrusted them to Nanni and Mammini and their suave salesmen and feted them.

Nanni and Mammini have been indicted. So was Antonio Micheloni. He was arrested in New Haven. Today he pleaded not guilty and was released on bail of $5,000 to face trial later.

WAR VET KNIFED IN ROW BY "ANARCHIST"

Frederick Crowley, a war veteran, was stabbed, he says, while defending the boys of the A. E. F. from the abusive tongue of a man who represented himself as an anarchist. The affair took place in a lunch room at B and Second streets, South Boston. Crowley said he had entered the lunch room in time to hear slanderous remarks by a man named Beck concerning the "fools who went across to fight."

Crowley is in a serious condition at the City Hospital.

The police learned the identity of Crowley's assailant and expect to take him into custody soon.

DISPUTE HOLDS UP CAMBRIDGE PAYROLL

Differences arising from increasing the salaries of three employes of the Cambridge Health Department by $160 a year instead of by $100, as has been customary, resulted in holding up the entire payroll of the department by City Auditor Charles H. Thurston.

The payroll is the first to fall due under the new budget. Two of the salaries under dispute are for sanitary engineers and the third for an ambulance driver. Each was to receive an increase of $150 a year.

According to Thurston, the weekly payroll submitted to him provided for a $100 yearly increase.

LASKER'S ILLNESS HALTS CHESS MATCH

Cleveland, April 12.—Illness of Edward Lasker of Chicago, challenger of Frank J. Marshall of New York for the United States chess championship, resulted today in postponement of the game which was to have been played at the Cleveland A. C. on Saturday next. Lasker is ill with ptomaine poisoning.

MARITAL WOES LEAD TO DIVORCE COURT

MISS VERA WEBBER
Daughter of Mrs. Violet Webber, who testified for her mother in divorce court.

MRS. VIOLET WEBBER
MRS. MARGUERITE E. FLAHERTY (UPPER)

Mrs. Webber of Mills, Who was accused by her husband of evicting him, failed to prove her charges of drunkenness in Norfolk County Divorce Court, but may get a decree for cruelty. Mrs. Flaherty of Medway won a divorce for desertion after a year of marriage.

HUSBAND SAYS HIS WIFE HAD HIM EVICTED

Theodore Webber, contesting his wife's suit in the Norfolk County Divorce Court, said that he received a formal notice to vacate the premises from his wife, to whom he had the week before deeded the house in which the family was living in Willis.

Mrs. Vera Violet Webber had received previous to this very pointed hints of the infidelity between them, she told Chief Justice Hall.

"He told me that he would cut my heart out, and he even attempted to do it, because I tried to console him when his father died," she declared.

The three Webber children testified for their mother.

Mrs. Webber sought her divorce on grounds of drunkenness, and testified that her husband was continually making home brew and entertaining his friends in the cellar.

Chief Justice Hall took Mrs. Webber's suit under advisement, declaring that although she had no case on grounds of drunkenness, he might find one on grounds of cruel and abusive treatment.

Mrs. Marguerite E. Flaherty of Medway was granted a decree nisi from Morgan G. Flaherty. One year after their marriage in 1917, her husband began choking and beating her and finally deserted her. Her suit was not contested. She was granted the custody of her three-year-old son.

PLAN $40,000,000 POWER PLANT

By Cosmopolitan News Service.

New York, April 12.—One of the largest electric power stations in America is to be built at Kearney, N. J. It will cost $40,000,000 and will have capacity to generate 400,000 horsepower.

Announcement of the huge project was made today by Thomas N. McCarter of the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey.

The Public Service Power Company, a new subsidiary, will do the building. A $16,000,000 6 per cent. gold bond issue has been announced as part of the financing plans.

Christiania, Norway.—The trade agreement between Norway and Portugal was signed last night. It provides for free importation of wine into Norway from Portugal.

PREDICT GENERAL ELECTION

Early Downfall of Bonar Law Government Is Seen in Row in Parliament

London, April 12. (By the Associated Press). — Neither the government nor the opposition is likely to derive much satisfaction from the commentaries on yesterday's scene in the House of Commons printed in the newspapers this morning.

England gasped when it read the press reports of the physical encounters and the singing of "The Red Flag" within the sacred walls.

The government is told that it has blundered and been slack, while the opposition is informed that it has brought upon itself the denunciation customary when any party in the House lets violence run away with reason.

The Chronicle says an early general election may be looked for.

MacDONALD ANNOYED.

None of the newspapers, not even the Daily Herald, Labor's organ, has anything to say in defense of the action of the Laborite extremists which, according to universal testimony, was much to the distaste of J. Ramsay MacDonald and the moderate leaders.

Mr. MacDonald is said to have been gravely annoyed at the injection of "the red flag" into the proceedings. Some observers say that when it started he turned around sharply and frowned, waving a hand deprecatingly to his followers seated behind him. John Robert Clynes, Sidney Webb and other responsible leaders, it is said, also shared Mr. MacDonald's annoyance and joined in the attempts to silence the singers.

WARNS LABORITES.

Furthermore, the labor leader is said to have seriously admonished the extremists at a private meeting held during the suspension of the House.

Report had it that upon the reassembling of Parliament the government would seek refuge in the appointment of a committee to examine the question of salaries paid to war veterans of the civil service, as a concession to the bitter opposition in the House.

It was the insistence of the Laborites, supported by many members of other parties, for a definite statement from the government as to what it intended to do for the veterans that formed the cloud from which developed the present storm.

FLETCHER SLATED TO SUCCEED HARVEY

By International News Service.

London, April 12.—Belief prevails in British diplomatic circles that H. P. Fletcher, American Ambassador to Belgium, will succeed George Harvey as Ambassador to England.

This report was ridiculed at the United States Embassy. Harvey will shortly sail for America on a furlough.

H. P. Fletcher.

FINAL REVIEW FOR GENERAL H. T. ALLEN

Washington, April 12.—Major-General Henry T. Allen, former commander of the American Army of Occupation in Germany, held his last review today. Tomorrow he completes forty-five years of active service, reaches the age of sixty-four and is automatically retired.

All troops stationed in the District of Washington were called out and passed before General Allen, in whose honor the demonstration was arranged.

MOTHER ADMITS KILLING SON BY CHLOROFORM

Caldwell, N. J., April 12 (By International News Service).—Mrs. Clarice Willard, a trained nurse before her marriage, admitted today, according to the police, that she accidentally killed her sub-normal son, fifteen years old, by giving him an overdose of chloroform.

She said she gave him the chloroform while he was in a paroxysm of epilepsy. She said she had, on previous occasions when he had had fits, given him chloroform without any ill effects.

She was not arrested.

Yet to determine definitely whether the boy's death was the result of an overdose of chloroform, Dr. A. E. Edel head of the Edel Laboratories in Newark, had been asked by the deputy county physician to aid in performing of an autopsy.

Mrs. Willard said her son had never been able to attend school because he was mentally deficient and subjected to aproxyms.

Mrs. Willard is under indictment for having shot a neighbor, Mrs. William E. Oldfield, several months ago for having trespassed on her property.

HARKINS MEMORIAL CONCERT PLANNED

Plans for the memorial concert to be given at the Tremont Theatre on Sunday evening, April 15, the proceeds of which are to be placed in trust for the benefit of the family of the late Edward J. Harkins of Roxbury, are well under way.

Mayor Curley, who was a lifelong friend of Harkins, is assisting the committee in charge.

The Mayor will make a brief address on "Loyalty"; the second act of "The Fool" will form part of the program, together with acts from all of the leading theatrical attractions in the city. The 101st Regiment Military Band, under the leadership of Sergeant "Jimmie" Coughlin, will open the program. Leo Reisman's orchestra will furnish musical selections and John O'Shaughnessy, tenor soloist, will sing. Percy Pollock, the genial "Bill Jones" of "Lightnin'," will act as announcer.

Last Postal Worker to Leave Germany Arrives in U. S.

Washington, April 12.—The World War is ended, so far as the Postoffice Department is concerned.

Walter B. Wiseley, the last postal employe to leave Germany, arrived here from Coblenz to make his final report. He served overseas for five years and two months.

O'NEIL PLAY GOES BIG IN LONDON

London, April 2.—The discovery of Eugene O'Neill and the American actors playing "Anna Christie" has pleased the London theatre world to an extent rarely equalled since Augustin Daly's company many years ago astonished England with the revelation that the Yankees could teach her something about the English drama.

Monday night "Anna Christie" opened, and the hardened wramatic critics have fired a salvo of laudatory adjectives in which no note of disparagement can be found. The audiences agreed with them and gave the company twelve curtain calls after the third act.

Hazen, Sleuth, Dead

New York, April 12.—William T. Hazen, 66, who was chief of the United States Secret Service from 1894 to 1898, died here today. He gained international fame for running down counterfeiters.

CARMEN MAKE WAGE DEMAND IN SECRET

With the expiration on May 1 of the existing wage and working agreement between the street car operators and the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company, representatives of the unions and of the company are holding a series of conferences with the hope that any serious labor trouble may be averted.

Under the present agreement, operators of one-man cars receive 59½ cents an hour, and operators of two-men cars receive 64½ cents an hour. Because 97 per cent. of the business of the system is done by the one-man cars, the prevailing rate is generally considered 59½ cents an hour.

No specific demands have been made public. It is the intention of those conferring to reach a general understanding before any information relative to the wage or working demands of the operators are made known. The report of the wage conference committee will be made known at simultaneous meetings of the locals represented.

Representing the men are three members of the eleven unions: George E. Keegan, of Lawrence, chairman; C. A. Taylor, Reading, and R. J. Egan, Quincy. John H. Reardon, of Worcester, general executive board member of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes of America, is assisting them.

AWARD CONTRACTS TO LOWEST BIDDERS

The Hazard Manufacturing Company of New York was awarded a contract for supplying the city with eight miles of lead covered cables for use in the fire department, at $14,532.12, by Mayor Curley. GERMAN 'REDS' ASK FRENCH ARMY AID

London, April 12.—A dispatch to the Daily Mail from Dusseldorf says 2,000 Communists from Elberfeld which is in unoccupied territory and two miles outside the French customs cordon, marched to Vohwinkel, a frontier post, and sent a delegation to request the French commander to occupy Elberfeld and Barmen.

This extraordinary action was inspired by the refusal of the Elberfeld authorities to provide relief work for the unemployed. The French pressure has forced many mills in the unoccupied territory to close through lack of fuel and raw materials, and unemployment is steadily increasing.

Berlin, April 12.—Germany's floating debt in discounted Treasury bills at the end of March was 6,000,000,000,000 marks, representing an increase of 500,000,000,000 marks during the last ten days of the month.

Germany Refuses to Obey Allied Order

Berlin, April 12 (By the Associated Press).—In a strong protest to the Inter-Allied Rhineland Commission against the commission's recent order that the German authorities must inform it when they intend to arrest any subject of the occupying powers, the German Government declares it will refuse to comply with the order.

The order, declares the note, gives the subjects of the occupying powers a protection such as is granted only to the less civilized states under the so-called capitulations, and infringes upon German judicial sovereignty.

Bavaria Must Explain Memorial Day Apathy

Munich, April 12.—Why the church bells of Bavaria, alone of all those in Germany, did not join in the general commemoration of the victims of the Krupp plant shooting on the day of the funeral has been made the subject on an interpellation by the Democratic faction in the Bavarian Diet.

POPE PERMITS REBURIAL OF CARDINAL

Rome, April 12.—Pope Pius has authorized removal of the body of Cardinal Bellarmino from the Church of the Gesu here, where it has been buried for more than 300 years. On April 24 the Cardinal's remains will be removed to the Church of St. Ignatius, according to a wish expressed in his will, and will be reinterred next to the tomb containing the dust of his pupil, St. Louis Gonzaga.

Cardinal Bellarmino, a nephew of Pope Marcellus II., became a Jesuit when eighteen years old and was one of the greatest preachers and writers of his time. At the death of Pope Leo XI., and again when Pope Paul V. died, he was spoken of for the Papacy, but the Sacred College always refused to choose a Jesuit as head of the Church.

Pope Pius finds a special connection with Cardinal Bellarmino in the fact that each was for many years librarian of the Vatican library.

PEGGY SMITTEN BY HEIR TO MILLIONS

Paris, April 12.—Peggy Marsh, whose love and matrimonial adventures have interested two continents, was today reported to be engaged to marry "Laddie" Sanford, heir to the Sanford, Washington, D. C., millions, and famous young international polo player.

Peggy, who occupies a large suite at the Hotel Majestic here, smilingly refused to comment on the report, but admitted:

"I like Laddie tremendously—he is so virile, so every inch a man."

Peggy also refused to comment on the rumors that young Sanford has been lavishing expensive gifts upon her.

Sanford could not be found.

JUANITA HANSEN DEFEATED BLACKMAILER'S PLOT WITH BLUFF

THREATENS ARREST OF PEDLAR

Film Actress Tells of Dope Agent's Bold Scheme to Demand Tribute

By JUANITA HANSEN.
Copyright by The York American.

BLACKMAIL!

Now, I was to find out the full meaning of the word blackmail. Experience was my bitter teacher.

A few days after my precipitate break with the grasping pedlar—my only dope "connection" in New York—Uncle Sam's mail brought a letter to my apartment. I did not recognize the scrawling handwriting.

I opened it. As I remember, it read (and I am rendering it grammatical):

"I cannot understand why you have not been to see me. I am holding that candy for you? See (C) what I mean?" (Note—"C" of course, stood for cocaine.)

"I expect to hear from you."

This curious communication was signed "T."

Then a Veiled Hint

A few days later I received another of these epistles. I had paid no heed to the first. The second read:

"You probably have forgotten your indebtedness of $150 to me. I wish to hear from you and am still holding the package.

"T."

Probably two days later came a third communication:

"Why haven't you phoned me? Why haven't you been to see me? What do you intend to do about this money? I need it and intend to get it! You cannot leave me like this. You know that I depended on you. This is the last time I'm going to write this kind of a letter.

"Send me some money.

"T."

Of course I owed this man nothing. His demand was a trumped up ruse to get me in his power again. The next letter showed this. This communication capped the climax for me.

"You have not called me up and I have written several times. Do you intend to pay me or not? Or do you want me to see your manager? I want my money! Guess you don't want your whole studio to know."

Now he was in the open.

Blackmail!

That very night I got Mr. T. on the telephone. I intended to call his bluff, though in my heart of hearts I was afraid. I knew he couldn't stand investigation. I knew he wouldn't do anything himself. But he could cause me a lot of trouble by sending anonymous letters to my studio. So I called his bluff. On the phone I said:

"You may not think anything of your life but I think something of mine. Now, if you want to land behind the bars, you just keep up writing these letters and I'll put you there!"

Now in Atlanta

A cringing note crept into his voice. I think now for the first time he realized his once Easy Mark would and could fight. I told him:

"I don't want ever to see you and I don't want you ever to communicate with me again."

I rung up. I never heard from him again. I heard of him, however. This same man is the pedlar I told you of, now spending his time in the Federal Penitentiary in Atlanta, Ga.

During this period I had established a new argument.

The quarrel with Mr. T had set my head reeling. The day I walked out of his office I knew the cocaine was slowly devouring the very best that was in me. I must give it up. I WOULD give it up. That was my one thought when I walked raging from the pedlar's apartment.

My repeated efforts to cut down had always failed. Somehow I just couldn't do without it.

When I left T.'s apartment I wondered where I would make another dope deal.

I went home and complained to my maid and my secretary of not feeling well. My secretary well knew by this time that I was using narcotics. She wanted me to see a doctor. I had lost faith in doctors. I had resolved never to consult one again, and I told her so. She said: "Juanita, you had just as well tell me yourself, because I know what you are doing. You know that only love prompts me when I tell you that you must see a doctor. You can't go on in this way; you can't. I have been to see a doctor, and he can help you. Won't you let me take you to him?"

Shunned Subject

It was the first time any one associated with me, outside the fraternity itself, had spoken to me about narcotics. This was a subject I never wished to discuss. It was my secret and I always intended it should be.

But somehow that particular night I was willing to listen to advice. I sort of felt I needed some one to take the reins out of my hands. Yes, I would try to believe in a doctor once more.

This doctor I hoped would be different.

That same night my secretary and I drove down to see the doctor. He is one of New York's best known physicians.

I was rather reluctant in telling him everything, but you know you must tell your doctor everything if you wish him to help you. When I told him the maximum amount I took every day—twenty grains of morphine and an eighth of an ounce of cocaine—he fairly gasped.

"IMPOSSIBLE!"

Then he questioned regarding where I was getting my stuff, whether it was pure or not, and all the usual questions physicians ask. I told him I had lost my cocaine "connection," but I had half an ounce of morphine. Very emphatically I told him:

"I must have cocaine! I must have cocaine!"

Then the impossible happened. At least I had always thought it impossible. My doctor said he would see that I got my precious dope!

Eureka!

If I must have my dope, he would see that I got the pure narcotic—no more of this doctored up pedlar's stuff.

At last "luck" was with me!

COSTELLO NOW INDICTED AS RUM PLOTTER

James Costello, alleged member of a so-called "million dollar rum ring," whose activities were revealed recently when Department of Justice agents raided his home in Brighton and arrested his wife and two male companions, was indicted by the special Federal Grand Jury for alleged conspiracy to smuggle liquor into this country.

Although the deliberations of the jury have not been fully completed, the indictment was returned as a result of the information given the jury by the earlier witnesses who were called in to testify.

Costello, at present, is out of the jurisdiction of the United States government, being, at last accounts, safely aboard the steamship Avontown, alleged to be one of the fleet of rum runners that supplied the Boston trade with its liquor. He is supposed to have been at his Brighton apartment but a short time before deputy U. S. marshals raided the place, but was warned by "the underground" in time to effect his escape.

A warrant issued for his arrest immediately after the raid was never served on him.

As a result of what occurred before the Grand Jury, a delay to an indefinite date was ordered, so that the government might secure additional witnesses. The identity of those to be called has not been revealed.

BOARD DEPORTS GIRL JILTED BY SOLDIER

New York, April 12.—Miss Sophie Breitback, unwed German mother, jilted by the American soldier who had won her, was ordered deported by the Board of Special Inquiry which heard dramatic appeals for her entrance into the United States.

The fight for the girl was led by Mrs. Clare E. Barton, wife of Major R. O. Barton, U. S. A., in whose house the girl had been employed while the major was stationed in Germany. She told the story of the unhappy girl and declared her husband would have appeared in person to back her appeal if he had not been transferred to Savannah, Georgia.

Miss Hansen's next article will appear exclusively in tomorrow's Boston American.

TAMMANY LEADER KILLED BY TAXI

New York, April 12.—Thomas F. Smith, fifty years old, former Congressman and for more than twenty years secretary of Tammany Hall, is dead following injuries received when struck by a taxicab. For many years he had been one of the Democratic leaders of the State.

DR. GRANT CALLS CHURCH FOE OF LABOR

New York, April 12.—Dr. Percy Stickney Grant, rector of the Church of the Ascension, flayed the Episcopal hierarchy as the ally of capital and aristocracy in oppressing labor in one of the most radical speeches of his sensational career at a luncheon given by the Advertising Club here.

"Bishop Burch, who died, and Bishop Manning, who is not yet dead," were among the "135 per cent. Americans," who closed the Sunday night forum of the Church of the Ascension after it had been conducted for fifteen years and the "church became too hallowed a place for the little speckegs of the workingmen and others," he declared.

DEFENDS FOSTER.

Dr. Grant confined his address to economics and the relations of capital and labor, defending William Z. Foster, the Communist leader recently freed of conspiracy charges in Michigan and declared that the working man will not stop until he has become "an entirely free man."

Commenting on the close of the forum, he named Ralph M. Manley of National Civic Federation, E. P. Wheeler and other notable "reformers" as influencing the late Bishop Burch and the present bishop in their decision. He continued:

FORUM BRED ARISTOCRATS.

"Then we found that our forum was developing aristocrats as well as proletarians. One of the most prominent members of the forum has become Lord Exmouth (Prof. Charles E. Pellew) and is seeking his seat now. I understand, in the House of Lords. Such a thing can't go on, our good Americans thought.

The minister declared that William Z. Foster's statement that there will be one union for the whole working class of the country is true.

"That is exactly what is going to happen, even if it is called by the bad name of 'syndicalism,'" Dr. Grant said.

DREXEL RELAPSES AFTER OPERATION

Paris, April 12.—Anthony J. Drexel, who was operated on three weeks ago for appendicitis by Professor Martel, suffered a relapse and lies at his home in a dangerous condition.

His son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Drexel, Jr., were hurriedly summoned to his bedside. Drexel put off the operation for a number of years after it was first suggested by his physicians, telling his friends that he feared the outcome.

RAILROADS OPEN BIG FIGHT AGAINST $60,000,000 FARE CUT

MILEAGE BOOK LAW UNDER FIRE

Injunction to Block Its Operation Is Sought in Federal Court Here

The Eastern railroads were to begin their fight against the interchangeable mileage book, carrying with it a 20 per cent. reduction in fares, in the United States District Court in the Federal building today.

$60,000,000 SAVING.

One million traveling salesmen, more than a million buyers, and every business house or individual using more than 2,500 miles of transportation each year is interested in the case. It has been estimated that a saving of $60,000,000 a year in travel rates will result from this order.

Interchangeable mileage books are an innovation. Before the war railroads issued mileage books on their own lines at a reduced rate. The United States Railroad Administration abandoned them during the war, however.

Since then, the National Council of Traveling Salesmen's Association has conducted a campaign for their return. They apparently won their fight on August 2, 1922, when President Harding signed a law passed unanimously by both houses of Congress, not only restoring mileage books, but making them interchangeable, and reducing fares on these books 20 per cent.

FOUGHT BY ROADS.

The hearing lasted for weeks, but the Interstate Commerce Commission upheld the act of Congress and ordered the railroads to put the new law into effect on March 15, 1923.

Three weeks ago the eastern roads, including the Pennsylvania, the New York Central and others, made an application to the Federal District Court here for an injunction to restrain the Interstate Commerce Commission from enforcing the order.

DAISY DRIVE OF LEGION TOMORROW

Several hundreds of young Boston women have volunteered to appear on the streets of Greater Boston, and in the stations, hotels and other public places, to sell daisies for the American Legion in the two-day Daisy Drive the last two days of this week. Funds raised will be devoted to the care and treatment of disabled war veterans.

RUM SALE CHARGED TO DRUG MANAGER

Herman Harris, manager of a drug store at Clarendon street and Columbus avenue, today faces the charge of selling whiskey to a police officer. Patrolman Welby says he exchanged a $2 bill for a bottle containing a liquid. As he reached the door Harris stopped him and said: "I guess you ain't a cop. Give me that bottle of colored water. Here's your whiskey." Then Welby made the arrest.

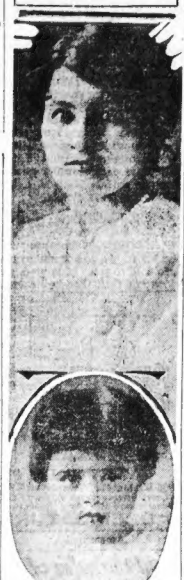
Fire Victims



MRS. ANNIE SHDEED. ANDREW SHDEED.

22 DRIVEN FROM SO. END LODGING HOUSE BY FIRE

Twenty-two occupants of a lodging house at No. 554 Tremont street, South End, were driven to the street in night clothes by a fire caused by one of the lodgers smoking in bed.

The latter, Edgar S. Hall, was arrested for drunkenness after being rescued from the blaze by police.

The blaze was discovered while most of the occupants were asleep. One of the lodgers, awakened by smoke, summoned firemen and police. Patrolmen Frank Hunt and Walter E. Macauley rushed into the house to Hall's room on the third floor, where they found the latter making feeble attempts to check the flames by beating them with a coat.

Patrolman Hunt dragged Hall from the house while Patrolman Macauley aroused the sleeping lodgers and assisted them to the street. Of the twenty-two occupants of the house, eight were women and four were children.

Firemen extinguished the blaze in less than half an hour and kept the damage down to $500.

The lodging house is a four-story brick building and is maintained by John Shdeed. The latter occupied the first floor of the house with his wife and three children.

ORDER LIMITS SPEED OF FIRE APPARATUS

General alarm fires will be announced by fifteen bell note signals, according to a general order of Fire Commissioner Theodore A. Glynn.

Signals have been arranged to designate what companies are wanted, what kind of apparatus is wanted and where it is wanted. Members of the department were warned not to exceed a speed of twenty miles an hour in congested districts, of twenty-five miles an hour in outlying districts.

chester, Mass., is dead as the result of being struck by a train at the Boston & Maine station here in an attempt to cross the tracks.

SUBPOENA FOR WARD MURDER CASE CABLES

Albany, April 12.—The contents of the cable messages which were exchanged between George S. Ward in Germany, and his son, Ralph D. Ward, in New York concerning the slaying of Clarence Peters by Walter S. Ward will be in the hands of Deputy Attorney-General Chambers tonight, the State's prosecutors now expect, despite of counsel for the Wards trying to prevent the Attorney-General from getting them.

Ralph Ward has refused to tell the contents of these cablegrams to Attorney-General Sherman in the latter's inquiry into the Ward case, although the son of the baking company's head has admitted that they revealed the alleged motive for and the real story of the killing of Peters by Walter S. Ward.

Mr. Chambers left here for New York city to make formal demand on Newcomb Carlton, president of the Western Union Telegraph Company, that he make good his promise to turn over the messages if he were properly served with a subpoena.

5 Killed by Autos in New York City in 24 Hours

New York, April 12 (By International News Service)—Five deaths in New York City in the last twenty-four hours, due to automobile accidents, spurred the authorities to renew their efforts to minimize the speeding auto menace. Figures made public today show that during March, thirty persons were killed and 143 injured by automobiles in the streets.

Announcement was made by Superintendent of Schools Ettinger, that safety lessons would be added to the school curriculum. The 25,000 school teachers will give children specially prepared lessons on the dangers from speeding autos.

SCION OF STEEL MAN MAKES NURSE RICH

The income from three-tenths of the estate of the late Norman Spang, scion of a wealthy family prominent in the Pittsburgh steel industry, is left by him to Bertha Fromentraux of Paris, France.

Mr. Spang, in his will, just filed here, made this provision, he said, "because she has been my faithful companion for more than twenty years and her constant care and devotion during the last four months while I have been sick has probably saved my life."

The widow and a daughter, Mrs. Sara Lang of Canandaigue, N. Y., will each receive the income from three-tenths of the estate. One-tenth will go to a friend. At the death of those named in the will, the principal will go to charities to be designated by the executor.

Mr. Spang, who resided in Paris, for twenty years, was buried in France. At his request his heart rests in a silver receptacle in the Allegheny Cemetery.

PLEADS GUILTY TO NEW FORGERY SCHEME

William M. Smith, alias D. J. Whiting and William F. Buckland pleaded guilty to forgery in Superior Court and was sentenced to from two and a half to three and a half years in State Prison. Smith's method was to write letters to business men to which they replied, thereby furnishing him with their signatures. He has served two terms in Auburn, N. Y., penitentiary for a similar offence.

TURKEY STIRS ENGLAND BY U. S. GRANT

By the Associated Press.

London, April 12.—Great Britain surprises entering an energetic protest against the granting by the Turkish Nationalists of certain concessions in Anatolia to the American interests, headed by Rear-Admiral Colby M. Chester, if these concessions are found to embrace the Mosul oil fields, it was declared here today.

It is generally believed that in its present form the Chester agreement with the Turkish Grand Vizier, Ismet Pasha, is a definite step toward the realization of the Pan-American plan for the economic development of Anatolia by an extensive railway system and the granting of large tracts of property rights upon a large scale.

In view of the official protest already made in Paris against these concessions to Americans as being in contravention of the Franco-Turkish railway and Ports agreement of 1914, it is considered certain the whole subject will be aired at the approaching peace conference in Lausanne.

How far the Washington government can discreetly identify itself with the project is regarded here as problematical, inasmuch as the Angora government's action in awarding these concessions is declared after they had alleged to have been previously given, at least in part, to other countries, will undoubtedly raise issues calling for judicial or even international settlement.

Turks Guard Against Return of Sultanate

Constantinople, April 12. — Under a bill submitted to the Angora Assembly by the National Defense party any person found guilty of an act against the sovereignty of the people, whether by word, deed or publication, will be tried and punished for high treason. It is pointed out this measure would deprive the opposition of power to work for the restoration of the sultanate.

CONTINUE HEARING ON FIGHT FUND ROW

The question of who struck the first blow in a quarrel over the division of proceeds of a boxing show held March 24 by the Sacred Heart Athletic Club of East Boston is troubling Judge Barnes of East Boston court. Thomas L. Regan, thirty, of No. 36 Neptune road, a boxer and manager, and Lawrence McInnes, nineteen, of No. 255 Paris street, an official of the club, were charged with mutual assault. The case was continued for one day to obtain testimony from Dr. Carl Peterson of East Boston Relief Hospital, as to the extent of McInnes' injuries. Regan admitted striking McInnes twice blows, but said he was struck first. McInnes denied striking Regan.

WILL DEMAND THAT CANADA QUIT LEAGUE

Ottawa, Ont., April 12 (By International News Service)—While the Canadian Parliament has decided that, for the time being, Canada shall continue its membership in the League of Nations, formal demand for Dominion's withdrawal will again be brought up before Parliament before the end of the present session, it was announced today.

International News Service is reliably informed that there is little likelihood of Canada appointing an ambassador to Washington before the Imperial conference of Dominion premiers which will open in London early in October.

The question of Canada joining the Pan-American Union will be aired in Parliament before long.

STRADDIE A SUNBEAM AND LIVE FOREVER

EINSTEIN'S THEORY PROVED

Parallel Lines Meet if They Travel Far Enough, According to Lick Observatory

By FRED J. WALKER,
Cosmopolitan News Service Staff Correspondent.

Lick Observatory, Mount Hamilton, Calif., April 12. — What changes must we make in our conception of the Universe, now that the epochal Einstein theory has been substantiated?

This is the question agitating the world following the announcement by Dr. W. W. Campbell of this observatory that experiments conducted by him and assistants have proven the new theory of relativity to be sound.

The answer, in so far as the average layman is concerned, is, substantially, "none."

DOESN'T AFFECT BASEBALL.

As far as the man in the street is concerned, Dr. Campbell does not expect his confirmation of the Einstein theory to make any appreciable difference. It will not affect baseball, taxes or prohibition. But in astronomy and in physics its importance is expected eventually to be more noticeable.

An astronomer with Dr. Campbell today explained popular angles of the theory. He said:

"Ponce De Leon, the Spanish explorer, who sought the fabled fountain of youth, wasted his youth. Had he sought after eternal youth by experimenting with mathematical theories rather than dissipating his energy in the Florida Everglades he might have attained everlasting fame.

"Speed, so Einstein avers, annihilates time. In other words if one could climb astride a sunbeam and travel through space one would not, according to the theory, grow old.

"Of course, the unfortunate part of the experiment would lie in the fact that where one attains this great speed, one would lose one's mass. Travel fast enough and weight is lost and time is distanced.

PARALLEL LINES MEET.

"Furthermore," the savant continued, "it will now be possible for the youth in geometery class to confound his teacher by pointing out that more than one line can be drawn through a point parallel to a given line. A fourth dimension makes its appearance, in other words."

Dr. Campbell is going to Washington today to deliver the main address before the annual meeting of the National Academy of Sciences, April 23.

His address will be limited to an exposition of the methods used in measuring the photographs of the sun taken during the eclipse in Wallal, Australia. These are the measurements that definitely upheld Einstein's new law.

WILL ROGERS' FACE CUT IN POLO GAME

New York, April 12.—Will Rogers is appearing in the "Follies" with a big strip of sticking plaster on his face. Rogers says that while engaged in a friendly game of polo he received a blow in the face from a mallet that laid open a wide stretch of his picturesque countenance. He declares that riding untamed mustangs on the Western ranges is a safety-first pastime compared to the gentle game of "horseback hockey."

LESTER NORRIS

WEALTHY BRIDE TO DO HER OWN COOKING

Chicago, April 12.—Mrs. Lester Norris, formerly Miss Deliora Angell, heiress to John W. Gates' $30,000,000 fortune, and her husband of less than a month, are going to make their home in a $50 flat on Main street, St. Charles, Ill., and she will do her own cooking.

The couple are speeding from her Winter home at Pasadena, in a private car.

Mrs. Norris has purchased a thirty-eight acre tract near St. Charles, where she spent her gingham dress days, and plans to move her million-dollar art treasures there from her gallery in Lake Forest.

The biggest shock to St. Charles was the news of the $50 flat which Mrs. Norris leased for three years. Young Norris is a cartoonist, and son of a furniture dealer in St. Charles, Ill.

U. S. SHIPS BARRED AS RUM RUNNERS

Washington, April 12.—The Shipping Board is within its rights in selling ships to foreign powers only on condition that such powers agree not to use the vessels for rum running or illegal transportation of narcotics. Secretary Hughes so ruled in a communication to the Canadian government, which had entered a blanket protest against the placing under Canadian registry of any vessel purchased under a conditional contract. The text of the reply to Canada has not yet been made public.

RESTRICT BROKERS IN USE OF RADIO

New York, April 12.—The governing committee of the New York Stock Exchange has prohibited the use of the radio to broadcast market information or forecasts of business by its members. Broadcasting of quotations is permitted, however, under certain regulations.

MORE SNOW FALLS IN ROCHESTER, N. H.

Rochester, N. H., April 12.—A one-inch fall of snow increased this city's record snowfall of the Winter to 106 inches, a record not equalled for more than fifty years.

dom of knowledge and of action here on earth, which is our "asylum."

WHO CAN tell what future wars will be like, or how horrible they will be? Twenty-five years ago men fought by arming hundreds of thousands and marching them against cannon. They fortified cities, put men on horseback and sent them galloping at each other. Now the fortified city is a joke, cannon fifty miles away can destroy it. Marching men on the ground, slowly moving, with airplanes hovering above them, are like rabbits chased by hawks.

THE LATEST development is a flying machine that will go where it is ordered, drop dynamite, come back again, with not a man in the flying machine. This French machine rises, lands and flies, controlled by wireless, no man touching it. Ten thousand such machines directed by wireless, from a safe distance, might conquer a nation without the possibility of even one Frenchman being wounded.

Horrible, you say? Not necessarily. Inventions of that kind will end war in the long run. If we could all kill each other merely by thinking, we would soon agree not to think on that subject.

WAR DECLARED ON 'DOPE' EVIL IN BAY STATE

War to the finish on the drug evil, increasing in Massachusetts with alarming rapidity, has been declared. Every Federal and State agency available will be combined in the fight.

Assistant United States Attorney James Sullivan and District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien of Suffolk County will meet within a few days to map out their campaign.

The narcotic squads of police departments, State police and Federal agents will be massed into a solid group, working in conjunction, in a widespread effort to clean up the entire State.

"Something must be done, and done at once," declared United States Attorney Sullivan. "It is getting easier and easier for people to buy drugs. Boys and girls are taking 'dope' in increasing numbers.

"We intend to make an example of every so-called 'dope' pedlar brought before us."

WOMAN KILLED BY AUTO IN READING

One woman was killed instantly and another woman was injured on North Main street, Reading, by an automobile.

The dead woman was Mrs. Minnie G. Fratus, forty years old, of No. 4 Main street, Reading, and her sister-in-law, Mrs. Elsie G. Fratus. The automobile driver, William R. Kirwick, of No. 3 Baldwin avenue, Everett, was arrested on a charge of manslaughter.

Kirwick, who drives for a Boston electrical concern, said that his lights were dim and that he did not see the two women until too late. The women had nearly reached home when hit by his auto.

BROADCAST DROPS COPYRIGHT MUSIC

Newark, April 12.—Broadcasting of copyright music from WJZ, the Westinghouse broadcasting station at Newark, will be discontinued because of the demand of the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers for the payment of license fees of from $200 to $5,000.

PAY BOOSTED IN TILTON, N. H., MILLS

Tilton, N. H., April 12.—The Carter Mills and the Elm Mills have posted notices of wage increases of 12½ per cent., effective April 30. The Carter Mills have started a night shift in the weave room.

SEEK TO OUST DIRECTORS OF MORTGAGE CO.

The old board of directors of the Greater Boston Mortgage Corporation, consisting of Frank L. Ferguson of Brooklyn, N. Y., as president; Arthur P. Teele and Raymond M. Adams of Brookline, Charles S. Ensign, Jr., of Newton and Harry P. Taplin of Boston, have brought a petition in the Supreme Court against A. A. Martes and others, seeking to have them ousted as directors.

It is alleged that the meeting at which they were elected on March 2 last was illegal.

Martel, who lives in Brookline; Joseph L. Shea of Boston, Wilder S. Barney of Malden, Andrew Canavan of Boston, and J. A. Southell of Quincy were elected as a board of directors at the adjourned meeting of March 2.

They organized by choosing Martel as president, and John L. Shea, treasurer and clerk.

The petitioners say that the respondents are assuming to exercise functions of their respective offices and have excluded Charles S. Ensign, Jr., as treasurer, and Effie N. Hunter, clerk.

Judge Crosby of the Supreme Court will hear the controversy on Tuesday.

"SIEGFRIED" WELL SUNG BY GERMANS

By ZOE FABER.

"Siegfried," the third of the Ring operas, was given yesterday afternoon at the Boston Opera House under the direction of Eduard Moerike, before one of the largest audiences of the season.

The title role was sung by Heinrich Knote, whose interpretation of the part of the young hero was satisfactory, if it was not brilliant vocally or histrionically.

Unquestionably, the characterization that Hardy Stelz made of the dwarf Mime, was little short of perfection. Not so much of the crook of a finger, the shake of his head, or the angular bend of his back was without a definite meaning of its own with reference to outlining more vividly the hideousness, the cunning, the craft of the dwarf. Vocally, he was entirely equal to the part.

Boys' Suits Outgrown Before Outworn

First Day—After we announced the sale of Boys' Suits with the "Hardshall Process" the department sales totalled three times the sales for the corresponding day the year before.

Second Day—Largest volume of sales for one day in the history of the department.

Third Day—Sales three times as large as a year ago.

Fourth Day—Head of the dept. in New York negotiating for more suits.

On Succeeding Days—Led in sales all departments of the store.

Today—About two people out of every four are demanding "Hardshall Process" for their boys' clothes.

Another improvement introduced in Boston by R. H. White Co. which will strike a responsive chord in the pocket of every parent who has to buy boys' clothes and who knows how fast even the best, heretofore, have worn out. See the "Hardshall" Suits on exhibition that boys have actually worn—outgrown but not worn out. Read the experiences described below. Note that boys' clothing so treated can be obtained only in "The Boys' Own Store," and then come in and actually see these long-wearing suits. They cost no more with this process.

Better Clothes for Boys

With the Newly Discovered and Patented

HARDSHALL PROCESS

The Longest Wearing Boys' Clothes That Money Can Buy

Boys' New "Rough-It" Suits (Short Trouser Suits) (Hardshall Process) for $10.95

Boys' New Spring 2-Trouser Suits (Short Trouser Suits) (Hardshall Process) for $12.95

Boys' New Spring 2-Trouser Suits (Short Trouser Suits) (Hardshall Process) for $15.95

Boys' New Spring 2-Trouser Suits (Hardshall Process) at $18.75, $20.00, $22.50, $25.00 (Short Trousers)

This new process consists in treating the fabric at all the places that wear out first—treating them with the remarkable "Hardshall" that coats every little fibre with a veritable armor plating. Better, stronger than anything ever discovered for this purpose, this "Hardshall" armor wonderfully resists the hard wear that boys give their clothing.

Suits retain their shape longer.

Simply pressing with a hot iron renews the life of the process. Lasts as long as the suit and makes the suit last longer.

Cleansing will not remove it.

You can FEEL it, but you cannot SEE it.

New Spring High School 2-Trouser Suits For $25.00

Boys' New Spring "Rough-It" Suits ("Hardshall Process" —for longer wear)

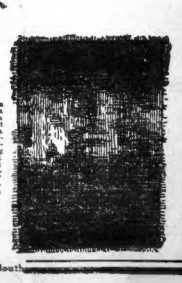
For $10.95

You can feel (but you cannot see) the extra wearing quality of the "Hardshall Process" where clothes give out—first, at the elbows, knees, seat, and inside of the trouser legs. And the trousers are treated so that the creases will stay in longer—for good appearance.

By Laboratory Tests the actual increase in wear of the "Hardshall Process" over the same fabrics untreated runs from 260% to 389%, which means the "Hardshall Process" means more than double the wear.

Drawing of a shrunken piece of suiting treated by the "Hardshall Process." The treated piece of fabric was placed on an abrasion machine against another piece of the same fabric but untreated. In a contest to see which would resist wear longer they were rubbed together 25,000 times. See how little the treated fabric was affected. And then see what happened to the other piece. (Illustrated at right.)



This is a drawing of a photograph showing what happened to a piece of suiting not treated after being rubbed against the same material by the "Hardshall Process." (See other illustration at left.)

WALSH FAVORS COAL BLOC TO END MONOPOLY

A coal bloc is suggested by United States Senator David I. Walsh to secure legislation against another fuel famine.

He offered this suggestion at a dinner of Brockton Chamber of Commerce. He asserted that the coal business is not only a monopoly but one badly mismanaged and that it is the government's duty to step in.

He suggested that New England Senators and Congressmen, regardless of party, form what he termed a "Coal Bloc." The Southern and Southwestern members of Congress, he went on, know nothing whatever about coal, so it is hopeless, as matters are now, to secure necessary legislation on the coal problem.

The same conditions we had this Winter will be with us next Winter in regard to coal unless drastic remedy is applied, the Senator declared.

He criticised President Harding for not having acted in the matter but Summer. Any schoolboy, he asserted, could have foreseen that a coal famine was imminent.

Ruins Beneath Sea Photographed From Aeroplane

By COUNT BRYON DE PROOROK.
Copyright, 1923, by Universal Service

Carthage, April 12.—The aeroplane has yielded remarkable results in the researches at the site of ancient Carthage.

Prince Waldeck, piloted by Pelletier Doisy, the French ace, has taken a unique film of the ruins beneath the sea. They were able to follow traces of the old sea wall for seven miles. They reported seeing columns hundreds of yards from shore.

Many Notable Weddings Are Set for June, Says Betty Alden

By BETTY ALDEN.

IF this particular Easter didn't keep the wedding fans very much on the go, it's safe to say that June will make up for it.

One of the biggest weddings of that month will be the marriage of Miss Edith Bremer to Henry Hardwick Faxton, the ceremony scheduled for June 16th at Emmanuel Church. The oldest daughter of the S. Parker Bremers should make an uncommonly striking bride, for she's tall and slender, a distinct blonde.

There are two sisters, Miss Mabel Bremer, who came out a few Winters ago, and Ruth Bremer, who's to make her bow next season, I believe. They and their father are homeward bound from a several months' trip to the Mediterranean.

Miss Edith Bremer is a member of the 1918 Sewing Circle, along with such girls as handsome Katherine Abbott, talented Mrs. Theodore Chadwick (Elizabeth Zarrahn), dark-haired Frances Fairchild, whose loveliness made her the subject for gorgeous war posters; "peppy" Mrs. Bernard F. Rogers, Jr. (Nina Higginson), a bride of last month and now honeymooning abroad; blonde-haired Princess Cantacuzene (Clarissa Curtis), who now makes her home in New York; popular Mrs. John Simpkins ("Mim" Fenno), a jolly member of the "younger-married" set along the North Shore; Mrs. Oliver Wolcott (Sybil Appleton), one of the bridesmaids at the Simpkins-Fenno wedding, and herself a bride of last December. To say nothing of a host of others equally prominent.

MR. AND MRS. FREDERIC E. SNOW have joined the large Boston colony at Hot Springs.

A MUSIC-LOVING group of society women are sponsoring the musicale for which Mrs. Walter C. Bayliss is opening her Commonwealth avenue home next Monday afternoon.

Among the matrons who are interested in the affair, which is being given by the Cosmopolitan Club are Mesdames Allen Chamberlain, Robert Treat Paine, 2nd, James Purdon, Ernest Lovering, Vittorio Orlandini, Henry Tudor and Sidney Hosmer.

DR. AND MRS. HOBART ENDICOTT WARREN are closing their long season at Palm Beach and are leaving this week for Fernandina to be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Carnegie, 2nd.

In the Summertime the Warrens and the Carnegies are not distant neighbors on the North Shore, where the Warrens have a place at Beverly Farms. "Seawold," the Manchester-by-the-Sea estate of the Carnegies, has been the scene of many gay times for the Shore's younger set. Last Fall the younger daughter of the house, Lucy Carnegie, was presented at the Essex County Club, while two years ago there were similar festivities in honor of the oldest daughter, Miss Nancy Carnegie.

WOMEN VOTERS' LEAGUE TAKES UP CHILD LABOR

Des Moines, Iowa, April 12.—A multitude of recommendations are to be acted upon by the fourth annual convention of the National League of Women Voters, today.

A measure of international co-operation to prevent war will urge the development of methods which would help to obtain domestic control of industrial affairs and domestic control of economic and commercial policies.

Development of closer co-operation with universities and colleges in extension work in civics.

Adoption of an amendment to the Constitution giving Congress the right to fix a minimum standard of child labor and giving the States the right to raise, but not lower, those standards.

Full appropriations for carrying out maternity and infancy laws.

Recommendation that only qualified persons be permitted to serve as members of board of education.

Support of a bill transferring work of the inter-departmental social and hygiene board to the Department of Justice.

Uniform laws concerning women, including equal interest of spouses in each others' property acquired after marriage by either or both and the right of each spouse to testify in lawsuits where the other may be a party.

That provision be made that women in industry, as a group, may share in the control of the conditions and their employment.

Ladies' Waist Line to Settle Fee for Dance

Lawrence, April 12.—The smaller the waist line the less a ticket will cost ladies attending the social and frolic to be held in the vestry of the United Congregational Church tomorrow night.

Members and friends who attend must pay an admission fee in pennies corresponding to the number of inches each measures around the waist.

REDS BURN IKONS, RAID CHURCHES

Moscow, April 12 (By International News Service).—Anti-religious demonstrations were reported today from South Russia, especially in the vicinity of Odessa.

Red workers were said to be raiding churches and burning ikons. Processions marched through the streets shouting blasphemies.

NOTRE DAME GLEE CLUB TO ENTERTAIN

The Notre Dame Glee Club of St. Mary's Parochial School Alumnae Association will give their first concert next Sunday evening in St. Mary's Hall, Harvard and Prospect streets, Cambridge. The club is composed of fifty young women who are members of the Alumnae Association. It will be assisted by Enrico Fabrizio, 'cellist of Symphony Orchestra; Virginio Capelloni, baritone, and Marie Capelloni, pianist.

HEIR PREFERS $10,000 RACING CAR TO WIFE

Nyack, N. Y., April 12.—Fred Higgins, sixty-nine-year-old Erie flagman, who recently inherited a fortune from the estate of a wealthy brother in St. Louis, was confronted today with the dilemma of choosing between a wife or a racing car. He couldn't manage both, he said. After consultation with friends, the racing car won.

Before leaving for St. Louis several weeks ago Higgins broadcasted his intention to marry and settle down on his estates if his good fortune was confirmed.

On his return he found that his announcement had been favorably received by a large number of women who wrote from all parts of the country that they accepted his offer in blank and that they would come at once on receipt of railroad fare.

Higgins confided to his friends today that most of the writers had touched on their ability to help him "manage his palatial estates," and, while that might be all right, what he really wanted was a racing car.

If there was any managing to be done he could do it himself, he said, so he offfered a local racing driver $10,000 for his best car. He could manage that better than a wife at his age, he decided.

Natural Linen Chair Backs and Arms in Italian Cut Work. A Foss design, unique, with a new pattern of crochet fringe.

Then we have our old friends, such as scarfs, pillows, luncheon sets, tea sets, card table sets, breakfast sets, holders, bibs, aprons, centerpieces and doilies done in cross-stitch, solid color work, solid white and the effective black and white, French knot stitch, Italian cut work—all the kinds we have learned to love, but more beautiful in design than ever.

The New Vanity Sets for the dressing table, consisting of three pieces are just as attractive in their dainty flower designs as they can be and introduce color in a charming way into the boudoir.

GETS NEGRO WHO FLED HOSPITAL

Patrolman Price of the East Dedham street station was startled today on Tremont street when he saw a brawny negro dressed only in a nightshirt and trousers.

The negro was making fast time. Price grabbed him and took him to the station. There it was learned that he was George E. Hill of Bunker street, Cambridge, and that he had fled the City Hospital via the roof and back wall.

Hill was recovering from poison which he said he took April 10 by mistake.

Are you at a loss as to where you can secure some particular brand or kind of foodstuffs? If so, write the Boston American Food Query Editor. We will answer your inquiry in these columns as quickly as possible.

Food Query Editor

Where can I buy Diamond Braid Ginger Ale? This ginger ale is put up in bottles, resembling the imported C. & C. ginger Ale and is sold here extensively through Connecticut. I took the above piece of good advice but as good as the imported article, and I would love to be able to purchase same here in Boston if possible. MRS. J. C. LEWISTON

Harvard street Newtonville, Mass.

We know of a Manufurk Ginger Ale, put up by the Diamond Bottling Company of Waterbury, Ct., and we presume that this is the Ginger Ale you refer to. We do not know of any store handling this product here in Boston, but we know it can be had at the J. B. Bland Company store in Lynn, Mass. No doubt they will fill a mail order for you.

Where can I purchase almond paste, such as is used in French pastry? Thanking you, I am

MRS P. M. PALISIEN

No 145 Washington street, Woburn, Mass

You can secure almond paste at any of the Cobb, Bates & Yerxa stores and S. S. Pierce stores in one and five-pound tins.

Food Query Editor:

In your food column two or three weeks ago you had a very interesting article on the potato situation as it existed at that time, and what you had to say has proven very true. I use quite a lot of potatoes every year and would, therefore, like your opinion on the market now. Do you think it will go higher? How are the supplies in Maine and New York States? The men selling potatoes always seem to be bullish, so I would like your unbiased opinion. Thanking you, I remain

MR. D. CALLAHAN

Malden, Mass.

The delivered Boston price on Maine potatoes today by the car is $2.25 per 100, put up in two-bushel bags. New York potatoes cost $2.5 per bag of 150 pounds, both New York and Maine potatoes costing alike. Information from a New York State leads us to believe that they are short of stock. In fact, we know of a case where they have tried to buy some stock from Maine. Under conditions, therefore, pure it up to Maine to supply New England with old potatoes until the new crop comes in, which will be about the latter part of June. Therefore, it would seem that today's prices are cheap, as the Maine supply is very limited, judging from all reports.

Food Query Editor

Some weeks ago in your paper you mentioned two or three markets in which one could buy the genuine imported Wiltshire bacon I meant to make note of these places at the time but neglected to. I do wish you would let me know again through your interesting columns where this product can be obtained

MRS B. F. KEITH

No 42 West street Somerville, Mass

You can purchase genuine imported Danica Canadian Wiltshire bacon at Sharp's Market, No. 177 Federal street; H. Morrill Company, No. 11 Merchants Row, Boston, Mass.

Food Query Editor.

Where can I buy Mrs Kidd's Pin Money pickles, put up in Richmond, Va.?

MRS. W. F. FITZGERALD

Newton, Mass.

John Gilbert Company, No. 428 Boylston street, and the Houghton & Dutton Grocery Department carry a full line of Pin-Money gherkins, pickles and chow.

Food Query Editor:

Can I buy this year's run of pure maple syrup and maple sugar in Boston? All I seem to be able to get is last year's stock. This I do not want. Is it late in arriving this year and if so, why?

MRS. JOHN STRANGE.

Audubon road, Boston, Mass

This year's crop of pure maple syrup and sugar is very late in coming in, due to the cold weather lasting so long. We generally have some warm days around the middle of March, and this starts the sap. It looks now as if this year's crop will be very limited, as the trees will be budding soon, and this will stop the sap from running. Saw a small lot of fancy maple syrup, this year's crop, at Dole & Bailey, No 19 New Faneuil Hall Market, and John Gilbert, Jr., Company No. 426 Boylston street, Boston, just received a small shipment of this year's maple sugar.

Food Query Editor:

Have you ever heard of a Hudson Brand of hams and bacon? If so, where can I purchase them in or around Boston? I have been buying them in Albany, N. Y. Thanking you I am

MRS ROSE FRENCH.

North Cambridge, Mass.

You can secure the Hudson hams and bacon, put up by C. A. Smithers & Hudson, N. Y., from William A. Doe, or Childs, Funn & Co., both of New Faneuil Hall Market.

AWARD PHONE WORKERS HERO MEDALS

Intelligent team work in helping the police to catch a man charged with murder has brought Theodore N. Vail bronze medals to Miss Elizabeth M Lonergan, night chief operator in Lawrence telephone exchange, and Mrs. Dustin Hamblett, formerly Miss Olga T. Worsman night chief operator in Lowell exchange.

Vail medals are also awarded to Miss Flora B. Bronski, supervisor of Peach exchange, Boston, and Marshall A. Oliver, line foreman at Biddeford, Me., for unusual acts of service.

Miss Elizabeth M. Lonergan

Miss Lonergan of the Lawrence exchange was informed that a fugitive from justice, charged with murder, might try to telephone Lawrence friends. She formed a plan by which any such call would be automatically referred to her desk

It came and was traced to a Lowell public telephone. But the man left before the police could act. Then Miss Lonergan joined forces with Mrs Hamblett (then Miss Worsander).

When the call was renewed two hours later, the man was induced to remain at the telephone long enough for police to get him.

Mrs. Dustin Hamblett

Miss Flora B. Bronski.

Miss Bronski won her medal for notifying five different agencies that lights were flashing on Beach switchboard from a Winter street building, with no response to the operator's reply. Later fire broke out, but was discovered by a watchman who was on the alert on account of Miss Bronski's notification.

Marshall A. Oliver.

Foreman Oliver of Biddeford dragged from a pool of water a lineman in his crew who had been knocked down by a high tension electric current. At great risk Oliver dragged the man thirty feet before the contact was broken.

WHITE SLAVE THREAT LED TO KILLING

MRS. ARMIE DI PARI

Worcester, April 12.—"He wanted me to go into a white slave venture with him, and when I refused he threatened to kill me. So I put a bullet through his brain. You'll find him at my home on Plum street. Here's the gun I killed him with."

This was the statement of Mrs. Armie Di Pari, twenty-eight years old, of No 8 Plum street, as she walked into the police station and confessed the shooting of Salvatore Martucci, thirty-five years old, a local gunman. He died at the City Hospital.

Martucci was on parole from State prison on a five-year sentence for robbery in Boston.

Mrs. Di Pari pleaded not guilty to a charge of manslaughter in First District Court today. She was held in $5,000 bail pending action by the Grand Jury.

INDICT GUARD FOR DEATH OF CONVICT

Madison, Fla., April 12.—At liberty here today on bail of $10,000, Walter Higginbotham, convict camp "whipping boss," is awaiting trial for first degree murder in connection with the death of Martin Tabert, of North Dakota, who witnesses said was beaten to death by Higginbotham.

The Madison County Grand Jury has indicted Higginbotham on three counts charging first degree murder.

Counsel for Higginbotham said they would admit the use of the lash but would attempt to show that Tabert's punishment was not so severe that it would cause his death. Camp officials maintain that Tabert died of natural causes.

Counsel for Tabert's family announced that a suit would be filed against the Putnam Lumber Company for $50,000 damages. Higginbotham was employed by that company at the time of Tabert's whipping.

John T. Gardner, private, Fourth United States Field Artillery, stationed at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, was one of the principal witnesses. He said that while serving as a convict with Tabert, after having been sentenced for stealing a train ride, he frequently had been beaten by Higginbotham.

He said Tabert was called out of line one night when the prisoners were being counted in, stripped of his underclothes by Higginbotham given eighty licks and then, because Tabert did not arise because of his weakness, Higginbotham gave Tabert about a like number of lashes.

The "whipping boss," according to the witness, had his heel on Tabert's neck, grinding his face in the soft sand, while the whipping was going on. As Tabert lay dying in his bunk the next day, Gardner stated, the prisoners were afraid to ask for a doctor

LOST FLORIDA AUTO PARTY HEARD FROM

Miami, Fla., April 12 (By International News Service).—Three members of the lost automobile party arrived here today, having walked 25 miles to report that the party was safe and in good physical condition despite hardships. There were 19 men and five women in the party. They left Fort Myers over a week ago in nine automobiles to make the first auto trip through the Everglades, and all traces of them had been lost. Aviators had made ineffectual attempts to find them.

RUSSIAN WHITE TROOPS SEIZE VLADIVOSTOK

By International News Service.

London, April 12.—Vladivostok, great Siberian seaport on the Pacific coast, has been captured from the Bolshevists by "White" forces after a fierce struggle, according to a report received today from Helsingfors.

The Red troops were said to have taken refuge outside the city, where they are awaiting reinforcements before attempting to retake it.

Vladivostok has been in the hands of the Soviets since the latter part of last year.

12 GALLONS OF HAIG & HAIG IN ALLEYWAY

Sergeants Miller and Gale of the East Dedham street police station are vainly trying to find someone who will claim ownership to twelve gallons of Haig & Haig Scotch whiskey, found in the rear of No. 1308 Washington street, South End.

The whiskey is at the police station.

Police officials are amused and perplexed at the find. Whether it was a case of conscience, expediency or faith in humanity, they cannot determine. For the present, however, the twelve gallons are treasure trove.

EX-HARVARD ATHLETE FACES $30,000 SUIT

Testimony showing that Miss Frances Winder of Roxbury has had to undergo a "baking process" several times since she was injured in a collision with the automobile of Robert W. Emmons, 3d, was given in Suffolk Superior Court where a $30,000 damage suit against Emmons is being heard. Miss Winder declared that in September, 1920, she was riding a bicycle on a street in Beverly when Emmons' automobile collided with it. She said she has been forced to use a cane ever since. The jury went to Beverly and viewed the scene of the accident. Emmons was captain of the Harvard baseball team several years ago.

Lewis Laboratories,
Chicago, Ill.
Gentlemen:

Believing I owe you a testimonial, I will tell you and to the world that I consider your new gland systematic treatment the greatest remedy of modern times. I have doctored for years without any relief and when you read of my story you will understand why I am so grateful to you. I used to be an actor in the Minstrel Show business and did lots of rough and tumble work. Years ago from overexertion I lost my manly vigor, my legs and feet gave way and a kind of paralysis set in on my left side. For years I had to drag my left leg and always wore the toes of my shoe soles off. Was numb across the small of my back, couldn't get up or down stairs. In fact I was a wreck every way. I tried everything without any help. I tried your gland treatment as a last resort. After three weeks' treatment I found I could sit down and raise my feet in the air. Before I wouldn't ra se my foot six inches from the floor. After five weeks the paralysis disappeared. I could walk or run as good as any man, my vigor has returned and I feel like twenty-five years younger. And everybody says I look it too. I honestly believe your gland treatment should be brought to the notice of everybody who has lost his health and pep and suffers as I did. I know it will help them for everything I have tried failed to help me, and everybody when I have recommended to try your gland treatment says the same. I am a Moose here, member L. O. O. M. number 17, Moose Legion No. 27 and my lodge brothers will sign their names to my statement I make.

Yours truly,
John Robert Andreas,
918 East Georgia St., Indianapolis, Ind.

A Special Combination Treatment for Woman

You will notice in the coupon that we ask whether the treatment is intended for male or female.

This is necessary because the two treatments are absolutely different as to formulas. The female treatment contains Lutein and is particularly recommended for the ailments to which women are most commonly subject. Any Physician will testify as to the wonderful value of Lutein for women's troubles and will also understand that this substance would be of no benefit if administered in a treatment for men. We mention this one point of difference to emphasize the fact that the Lewis Treatment for Women is especially prepared for that sex.

Here Is the Experience of One Michigan Woman

Lewis Laboratories
Chicago, Ill.
Gentlemen:

Enclosed you will find money order for which please push my next treatment, as I am nearly out of my last supply. Your treatment for the rebuilding of the glands is a most wonderful discovery, and words cannot express my gratitude to you for what the treatment has done for me.

Nine years ago I went to the hospital here to have a fibroid tumor removed, and on the operating table several other organs were also removed. Since then my life has been miserable. I suffered so much that I would have committed suicide were it not for my two sons. I tried everything without any relief, and the agony was awful. I was advised to try your new gland treatment and I have thanked my creator ever since. The first week I noticed a remarkable change, my head seemed clearer, my nerve system felt lighter and I improved so rapidly, I had a new ambition instilled in me to live.

I am recovering so rapidly that I don't want to interrupt the treatment, so please rush this to me. I have recommended your gland treatment to so many people. I again want to thank you for what your treatment has done.

Yours for health,
Mrs. Fanny Griggs,
1208 Burton St., Flint, Mich.

What You May Expect This Treatment to Do for You

The Lewis Method will positively Rebuild and Replace worn and wasted gland tissue. It will increase vitality both physical and mental. It is especially recommended to men for Prostatic troubles, Liver, Kidney and Bladder disorders and Rheumatism, both muscular and joint.

The instructions and suggestions that accompany the Demonstration Treatment will tell you about the Lewis Treatment in much greater detail than is possible in a general announcement.

Too Much Heavy Work Is the Cause of Many Breakdowns

Lewis Laboratories, Chicago, Ill.
Dear Sirs:

It does not seem possible that you can restore young vigor and strength so quickly through so simple a treatment. I fell from a ladder some months ago, and the shock so unnerved me that I lost all my vigor and pep. A member recommended your treatment and it has certainly done wonders for me. My wife said a week ago that the change in me amazed her. The treatment put a youthful vigor in my blood, and I feel so much younger, it is unbelievable. My wife is now starting on your special treatment for women. Am talking of your treatment to all my friends and will be glad to write to anyone about this.

Gratefully yours, Mr. James Waindl,

STORIES OF BOSTON TOWN
By Jo Swerling

TRAFFIC OFFICER McDONALD IS FOND OF SWEETS. ALL DAY long he lives on traffic jam and the raspberries he gets from motorists who wait for his traffic signal to make up its mind. It isn't Mac's fault. The smallest hick village in the State has better traffic signals than the one he chaperones at Chaos Square.

GO! STOP! WAIT!

The coolest, calmest man in Boston is a traffic copper named McDonald. His post is at Chaos square, corner of Bedlam and Babel streets, otherwise named Boylston and Tremont streets. Anybody who doubts that a kind Providence guides and protects the harried motorist ought to stand alongside of McDonald around four or five o'clock any week day.

Alongside of McDonald is a little tin toy, a silly thing that looks as though it had been purchased at one of Mr. Woolworth's ubiquitous shops. Little Willie might find an hour's sport in this puerile device. Yet it is intended to guide some 8,000 motor cars which pass McDonald daily.

When McDonald pulls a little switch, the woozy device registers coyness and indecision. It's one of those conservative machines which hesitates to speak its mind. It starts to say "Go," wobbles, appears to say "Stop," wobbles some more and finally wavers around "Go" just as the worried line of cars, with a plaintive shrieking of sizzling brakes, comes to a stop

Lots of Comedy in Chaos Square

There's a lot of comedy around this coy, wiggling finger, but it's no joke to Traffic Officer McDonald who is responsible for traffic in Chaos Square, and it's no joke to the motorists who have heart failure, palpitation of the gear-shift arm and acute paralysis of the clutch leg trying to make out the elusive command of this traffic signal which must have been invented by Sam Lloyd.

Downtown Boston is a labyrinth, a jig-saw puzzle of crazy streets and alleys, narrow sidewalks, bumpy and ill-paved pavements. During the rush hours (which means all day long) wailing is a precarious, nervous, ill-tempered exercise. Driving is nothing short of folly. The greatest optimists in the world are the long suffering dubs who have committed this heinous crime of buying a car and driving it downtown. If you don't think it's a crime you ought to hear Traffic Officer McDonald tell 'em.

One man started the other day from Summer and Devonshire streets. He had done a good day's work and was feeling humanitarian and highly civic. After almost running down a score of pedestrians he managed to get by the death trap at Winter street. He was perspiring freely by the time he rounded the corner and started up Tremont street to the dread Chaos Square. When, fifteen minutes later, he rounded the corner and started up Boylston street, he was a paranoiac, a hypocondriac, an anarchist, and cured of the habit of driving into town.

Downtown Boston Like Plague Spot

Along the tree-lined outskirts of the suburbs where this motorist lives he may be seen on Saturday and Sunday afternoons driving his car along, but he eschews the downtown section of Boston as though it were a plague spot.

And that's what it is. The plague of the traffic jam is upon us. It took our friend nearly an hour to get from Summer and Devonshire past the Little Building. A condition that has been in past years a nuisance has now become intolerable—a menace.

It has been suggested that the barring of motor trucks from the business section downtown might alleviate the condition. Most of the motorists and pedestrians would welcome a traffic law which barred all sorts of motor traffic in the section between 9 in the morning and 4 in the evening. It would be a blessing if such a law went into effect at once.

Until such a law is passed — and at this writing it appears inevitable, unless downtown Boston is relieved, a slight relief would be afforded by the junking of the tin humorist used by Traffic Officer McDonald and his confreres of the traffic squad—the safety signal which can't make up its mind.

JAIL TERM FOR GUN TOTERS, SAYS O'BRIEN

"No ass stant in my office has the right to recommend a fine in a case where a man is charged with carrying a revolver I believe that any man guilty of such an offence should go to jail, and I have instructed all of my assistants to recommend nothing but jail sentences."

T. C. O'Brien.

The above was the declaration of District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien to Judge O'Connell of the Superior Criminal Court, when informed by the latter that Assistant District Attorney Frank C. Deland had recommended that John D'Este, charged with carrying a revolver, be allowed to enter a plea of nolo contendre, and that the case be placed on file. Judge O'Connell later explained D'Este was charged only with making threats.

Counsel for D'Este elected to stand trial rather than pay a $50 fine imposed by the Municipal Court.

D'Este is said to have threatened a coal dealer's watchman when he went to the coal yard to order coal. He contends he had a permit to carry a gun.

BOSTON COUPLE HELD FOR MARLBORO THEFT

Marlboro, April 12.—Miss Augusta Rosenberg of Saratoga street, Orient Heights, Boston, and Lawrence E. Feldman of Westminster street, Boston, are charged in court here with the larceny of two suits of clothes from a local tailor. Tony Marano says the man vacated with the clothing after the couple called on a pretense of having the girl's coat repaired.

CENT A GALLON "GAS" TAX URGED

Concord, N. H., April 12.—The ways and means committee of the New Hampshire House has recommended a cent a gallon tax on gasoline, a straight tax on intangibles with the provision that the revenue be retained in towns where collected, and introduced an inheritance tax bill which would make the State an heir to personal estates and dividing such estates into three classes.

HEARST RECEIVED AT WHITE HOUSE

Washington, April 12.—William Randolph Hearst and Mrs. Hearst spent the day in Washington, and were received at the White House. Mr. Hearst talked with President Harding more than an hour. Mr. and Mrs. Edward Beale McLean entertained Mr. and Mrs. Hearst at luncheon.

OBSERVATORY AT PORTLAND CLOSED

Portland, April 12.—The famous Munjoy Hill Observatory has been closed to visitors for the first time since it was built, 118 years ago. Its reopening in the future is a matter of conjecture, as it has not been self-supporting. It is privately owned by Mrs. Ellen M. York.

WIFE FINDS KEY, RAIDS SUITE

Declares Cambridge Physician and Nurse Were Found in "Love Nest"

Discovering an address on a tag attached to a key found in her husband's coat pocket, Mrs. Florence Ledden Marvin, wife of Dr. Frank William Marvin, No. 54 Larchwood drive, Cambridge, entered a suite on Audubon road, occupied by Miss Rosalind Byrnes, twenty-five years old, a nurse.

She found endearing letters from her husband to the young nurse, together with photographs, gifts and other articles indicative of an intimate acquaintance, the wife alleges.

HAS WAR RECORD.

Marvin, a Harvard Medical College graduate, has an enviable war record. He is a prominent clubman and sportsman. When interviewed at the Harvard Club he refused to comment on the case, other than to say he would contest his wife's suit for divorce.

According to the divorce papers filed by Mrs. Marvin she said nothing about her first visit to the exclusive apartment on Audubon road. About March 1, she alleges, her husband became abusive, treated her badly, swore, and was formal and abrupt when he saw her.

Later, accompanied by her brother she visited the Audubon road address at midnight. From the corridor, she heard her husband talking to Miss Byrnes. Using the same key she had used on her previous visit, she entered and claims she found Miss Byrnes in a kimona. Her husband, she alleges, was already in bed. After an all-around exchange of words, she and her brother left the apartment.

NAMES 26 DAYS.

Mrs. Marvin named twenty-six days in January and February on which she declared her husband had remained at Miss Byrnes's apartment.

In the equity motion sessions of the Superior Court, Mrs. Marvin was allowed $60 a month maintenance and $100 counsel fees pending the trial. The case will come up during the May session in Middlesex County Superior Court.

Miss Byrnes, who is said to have been employed by Dr. Marvin in his private cases, has not been seen recently. Friends believe she is in Swampscott.

ROXBURY DANCER IS INFANT PRODIGY

The "Little Wonder Kid" is the title New York has pinned on five-year-old Rose Abelson, child dancer, of No. 11 Kenniston street, Roxbury. For more than a year little Rose has been dancing in public exhibitions in the big city. Now she has started performing in local theatres. This week she appeared one night at the Shawmut Theatre. She expects to dance in other Boston theatres soon, and negotiations are under way for putting her in the movies. Her mother, Mrs. Fannie Abelson, is managing the affairs of the infant prodigy. Mrs. Abelson is also the child's teacher.

ATTACK ON 'SPIRIT' PHOTOS

Jesuit Says Author Knows Mediums Hoaxed Him, But Is Unwilling to Confess

"What I can't understand," said Dr. Watson, "is why Fr. C. M. de Heredia, S. J., came all the way from Worcester to New York to see Sir A. Conan Doyle."

The great investigator frowned.

"Obtuse as ever, Watson," he frowned. "Why Fr. de Heredia left his Holy Cross College to visit Sir Conan is interesting, but not important. The big thing is —why did Sir Conan refuse to see Fr. de Heredia?"

He frowned.

Dr. Watson forebore to speak. Holmes went to a cabinet and took out a hypodermic needle. He frowned.

"Our problem is a double exposure," he frowned.

Sherlock Holmes frowned and jabbed the hypodermic into his arm. He frowned.

It was indeed, as the great detective had predicted a double exposure. Father de Heredia pulled both exposures

The first exposure concerns Sir Conan's spirit photographs. These, the Holy Cross teacher charges are fakes.

They are, he alleges, double exposures.

The second exposure concerns the origin of Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson.

"Sir Conan is not the originator of these characters," said Father de Heredia. "Dr. Bell of Edinburgh, created the character of Sherlock and was himself the original Dr. Watson."

The Jesuit priest then explained his visit to Sir Conan in New York. He said

"Sir Arthur was a good Catholic during his boyhood and until he went to Edinburgh University. There, after meeting Dr. Bell, he became a materialist. During the latter part of his life he has been floundering about to find a substitute for the religion he cast aside

CALLS DOYLE A "FAKER."

"The purpose of my visit was to discuss with him a return to the Roman Catholic religion."

The British author and exponent of Spiritualism declined to meet the Jesuit. Discussing Father de Heredia's charges, he said that the latter resorted to trickery in his expose of spirit photography.

Whereupon Father de Heredia, in an interview at Worcester, came out flatly with the accusation that Sir Conan was a fifty fifty faker

The other 50 per cent, he explained, was dupe.

Father de Heredia's demonstration of how Sir Conan's spirit photographs are produced was conducted a few days ago in the laboratory of the Scientific American in New York city.

SAYS PRIEST USED PAINT.

J. Malcolm Bird, associate editor of the Scientific American, who saw Fr. de Heredia make the demonstration said, that the priest used luminous paint on his hand to mark a plate to be tested for spirit photography.

He said Fr. de Heredia asked witnesses to initial a plate, and holding his hand on the plate as though to study it, had in his palm an image, covered with luminous paint, which was transferred to the plate. Mr. Bird said, Mr. Lescarbourg, one of the witnesses, distinctly saw the luminous paint under the priest's hand.

Mr. Arthur was particularly displeased by a statement of Fr. de Heredia that an apparent paraffin cast of a spirit's hand, could be made by blowing up a rubber glove and covering it with hot paraffin removing the glove when the paraffin had cooled.

The Spiritualist said his spirit hand cast was made in the presence of Dr. Geley, head of the Psychic Institute of Paris. Professor Charles Richet, of the University of Paris, and Count De Gramont, and showed plain markings, and wrinkles and finger prints.

"The exhibits that Sir Conan Doyle showed in Carnegie Hall, New York, last Sunday night during the course of his lecture do not prove the existence of so-called 'spirit' photography," Fr. de Heredia continued

"Ectoplasm" is supposed to be a mystic substance that oozes from the human body and takes different forms, including the outline of those of the dead.

Father de Heredia then gave an impromptu demonstration of that which he declares is the "ectoplasm" of the mediums by pulling out many inches of gauze from a woman's side comb and more gauze from a hollow celluloid finger.

The mediums hide the gauze, or some animal substance until the "spirit" photograph is about to be made, he asserted. While the room is darkened they place the gauze near their bodies and the developed plates show the mysterious substance.

When the lights are turned on the gauze has been returned to the comb, celluloid finger or other hiding place.

"Some of the mediums use a gauze like that found in the stomach of a pig," the priest went on. "It, this is attached a string. The gauze is then concealed in the mouth of the medium and at the proper moment pulled out as an "ectoplasm."

GHOSTS MADE TO ORDER

FR. HEREDIA'S "SPIRIT" PHOTOGRAPH

$2,500,000 in Drugs Burned by Police of New York

New York, April 12.—More than $2,500,000 worth of narcotic drugs and hundreds of opium pipes, many of them of high value, were burned in the furnaces at police headquarters today.

The doomed property included stores of hasheesh, heroin, opium, morphine and other drugs seized during the last year by the narcotic division of the police department.

The burning was by Dr. Carleton Simon, Special Deputy Police Commissioner, and James Murray, the headquarters property clerk.

$30,000 LIQUOR TRAIN LOOTED BY BANDITS

Peoria, Ill., April 12.—Fourteen armed men last night held up a Santa Fe freight train, northbound for Chicago, and stole $30,000 worth of whiskey and alcohol.

Four armed men boarded the caboose of the freight train at Pekin, in Tazewell County, and covered members of the crew and a railroad detective, who was aboard to guard the shipment. Two of the bandits stood guard in the caboose while the others boarded the engine and ordered the engineer to proceed to Crandall's Crossing, two miles north of Morton, where the liquor was transferred to trucks.

CLARA BARTON TREE PLANTED ON COMMON

Mayor Curley, who at noon today was scheduled to plant a tree on Boston Common in honor of the national celebration of the birthday of Clara Barton, received the following telegram from Charles Lathrop Pack, president of the American Tree Association:

"We are in the tree-planting army. May the tree you plant for Clara Barton on Boston Common live as long as her good deeds will live. The American Tree Association is glad to register this tree well at the top of the long list of trees being planted in memory of the founder of the Red Cross. Alchemist Claims He Makes Gold From Silver

By Universal Service.

Paris, April 12. — Jollivet Castelot, famous alchemist, supported by Edouard Caron, chemist of the Free Faculty of Medicine, announces that he has discovered the "philosophers' stone."

According to Caron's statement to the Sorbonne faculty, Castelot takes chemically pure silver, reduces it to powder, adds a tiny quantity of lead phur and arsenic, mixed with a minimum quantity of exsulphur antimony, puts it into a furnace and bakes it at 1,200 degrees.

The result is a small nugget of gold.

The Sorbonne faculty skeptically declared to appoint an investigating committee.

The arrests followed complaints by Dr. Jones that some one had been broken into several times within a week and sums of money and articles of value taken.

The youths, each seventeen years old, were booked at the East Dedham street station and their names were withheld.

Diphtheria Talk Ends in Row at Brookline

150 QUIT MEDICAL MEETING

Refusal to Hear Antitoxin Protest Arouses the Ire of Many Women

Refusal to hear protests against the use of diphtheria toxin-anti-toxin in the public schools by Health Officer Dr. Francis P. Denny, acting as chairman at a health meeting called by the Brookline Medical Society in the high school of that town, caused 150 persons out of an audience of 300 in attendance to walk out of the hall.

Following a speech on the Schick test and the method of immunization by Dr. Benjamin T. White, director of laboratories of the State Department of Health, Henry D. Munn arose and asked permission of the chair to address some questions to Dr. White and present the other side of the case.

REQUEST IGNORED.

He said he had been delegated by a large number of Brookline residents to represent them at the meeting and he deemed the question such an important one that both sides should be heard

Mr. Munn said he was counsel for the Medical Liberty League of Brookline, with over 200 members, that he had the greatest respect for Dr. White, but felt that he should be heard.

Chairman Denny suggested that the League hold a special meeting of its own but, it is asserted, ignored Mr. Munn's request to speak.

Mr. Munn countered by asserting that inasmuch as the meeting seemed to be open for only one side of the question, that he and other citizens of Brookline interested in both sides of the problem could have no further purpose in the meeting and would leave.

He took up his hat and coat and was followed into the aisle and out of the hall by nearly half of those in attendance, mostly women.

TELLS OF BENEFITS.

The substance of Dr. White's speech to which exceptions were taken, was that diphtheria was definitely preventable. To those who are susceptible, he said, three—and sometimes more, when occasion requires—injections under the skin of toxin antitoxin would make them immune from diphtheria for at least eight years, and probably for life

SOMERVILLE WOMAN FOUND DEAD IN HOME

Katherine Reed, sixty-five years old, of No. 291 Broadway, Somerville, was found dead in her home by Patrolman Fitzpatrick of the Somerville police force. Death was due to heart trouble. SUPREME COURT WAGE DECISION "CALAMITY FOR WOMEN"

MOVE TO CURB BODY GROWS

Tidal Wave of Reaction Follows Minimum Pay Decree

By WINDER R. HARRIS, Editorial Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, April 12.—The tidal wave of reaction against the Supreme Court decision declaring minimum wage laws unconstitutional spread with rapidly increasing momentum among the progressive members of Congress and champions of women's rights today.

Representative James A. Frear of Wisconsin, progressive leader and author of a bill requiring all but one of the justices to concur in a decision nullifying any Federal or State statute, declared the minimum wage decision "has reached the climax of judge-made law."

Mrs. Ascheim, director of the Women Bureau of the Department of Labor, termed the decision a "setback to the women workers of this country."

There is little doubt that this action by the court will result in vigorous demands in the next session of Congress for some kind of a curb on the tribunal's powers to nullify laws. And there also seems to be no doubt that this movement will succeed.

Many of the Democrats are expected to support the progressives.

Representative Frear pointed out that while five justices said the minimum wage law was unconstitutional, two justices "could not find" and the position of the presiding judge (Brandeis) is equally certain.

JOHN BOWERS appearing with Cullen Landis and Lois Wilson in "The Woman of Bronze" has a grievance. Other players who boast proficiency in some specialty—such as dancing, clowning, tumbling, horseriding—get a chance to do it before the camera. But Mr. Bowers will never get a chance. He is an excellent runner, having tried his mightiest a few years ago to catch up with the record makers. "What good will it do me," he remarks sadly, "to be shown in a picture doing the hundred in ten flat? Everybody'll say they're just speeding up the camera."

MAURICE CANONGE, the "Vronzo" of "Trilby," now in production at United Studios here decided to change his name. He realizes that Canonge is rather difficult for the American tongue, and so henceforth may be known as "Maurice Cannon." This entails some sacrifice for a star who has attained a reputation in Europe but Cannon is determined to forsake the Parisian stage and screen and devote his time and efforts to American pictures

JUDGE UPHOLDS WOMAN'S RIGHT TO HIDE AGE

New York, April 12.—Woman's age-old privilege to keep her age to herself despite her "emancipation" by the nineteenth amendment, was upheld by Judge Alfred J. Talley in the General Sessions Court.

Miss Virginia Leighton, white of hair, was being questioned in a case in which she charged the theft of a coat, and the attorney for the defense demanded that she tell her age. When she refused, he appealed to the court, but Judge Talley replied:

"The court will hold that no woman has to tell her true age in this court against her will. Despite contentions that women now have all the privileges men have, and should suffer all the disadvantages as well, I do not agree. A woman's right to conceal her true age must not be invaded by my court."

He saw buildings and their living occupants destroyed by the flames while spreading the warning to other families to leave the threatened area.

branded

Just one little thing proved big enough to offset his otherwise well-groomed appearance. It at once branded him as an unfastidious person.

YET he, himself, was quite unaware of it—that day or any other day. He was well-dressed and spruce looking. He'd pass agreeably in any crowd.

But every time he opened his lips to speak his teeth became a silent indictment of the man's real sense of fastidiousness. They were not clean. They were dull, stained and bore marks of neglect. And with a great many people he came in daily contact with he was marked down as a careless person. To some he was even revolting.

Notice for yourself today how you instinctively watch a person's teeth when he or she is talking. It's done unconsciously because the eye automatically seeks the source of a sound. This means that in conversation your teeth are being constantly watched by someone.

Only the right dentifrice—consistently used—will protect you against such criticism. Listerine Tooth Paste cleans teeth a new way. The first tube you buy (25 cents) or the free sample (see coupon) will prove this to you.

You will notice the improvement even in the first few days. And, moreover, just as Listerine is the safe antiseptic, so Listerine Tooth Paste is the safe dentifrice. It cleans yet it cannot injure the enamel.

KOTSONAROS AND CALZA FIT FOR BIG MAT BOUT TONIGHT

10 MAT STARS ON BIG INTERNATIONAL CARD

By JACK CONWAY.

Ten wrestlers with international reputations! George Kotsonaros, Greek champion, against George Calza, Italian titleholder, in the feature bout to a finish.

Stanley Stasiak, Ernest Siegfried, Mike Parish, Henri Lobmayer, Jack McGrath, Lawson Pinkham, Frank Yusko and Justina Silvia, all on the same card.

That's why the Boston Arena will be jammed to capacity tonight at this great international wrestling carnival, which will be staged under the direction of the Old Howard management.

It is the most impressive array of grapplers that has ever appeared on the same program.

The Old Howard management has put on this elaborate card in defiance of the wrestling trust, which tried to dictate the local policy.

Edgar Lobdell and Paul Bowser have been subjected to bitter attack since they showed they intended to defy the rulers of the wrestling game in this country. Agents of the trust in Boston have taken up the fight of the master minds, who direct affairs from Chicago and Buffalo.

The managements of the wrestling trust are upset because Calza, Kotsonaros, Stasiak and other youthful stars refuse to bow to their dictates and act as door mats for broken down champions who still desire to pose as champions. It is not any secret in wrestling circles that Stranger Lewis, world's champion, could be defeated if he were to meet one of several youngsters in finish matches.

Of course the wrestling trust cannot be blamed for making a last frantic kick as its own death rattle becomes louder. Naturally friends of the trust, which has ruled the mat game for so many years, are much concerned over the passing of the men who built up champions much as a child does toy blocks.

Kotsonaros and Calza Should Furnish Lively Battle

Kotsonaros and Calza are expected to furnish a brilliant battle tonight. There is intense rivalry between this pair. When they met some time ago in a handicap contest, Kotsonaros gained the decision.

Calza then refused to battle the Greek idol in a finish contest. He was finally forced to do so when the Old Howard management announced that the Italian champion would not be allowed to show in this city until he met Kotsonaros.

Kotsonaros is rated as a more skillful wrestler than Calza. He is also a better student of the mat game than the Italian.

Calza, on the other hand, is heavier and stronger than Kotsonaros. If the match goes more than an hour and a half, Calza's extra weight will give him an advantage. Kotsonaros, however, says he will force the issue from the start, and that he will have gained the victory inside of an hour.

Mike Parish Will Give Stasiak Opposition

Mike Parish, a mat giant, may be relied upon to make things mighty interesting for Stanley Stasiak, mighty Polish wrestler. Parish has battled most of the headliners and is of the opinion he will be able to stop the sensational wrestling streak of the Polish favorite.

There is considerable interest in the appearance of Ernest Siegfried in a finish bout with Henri Lobmayer. Siegfried is better known as the German Oak. He is 6 feet 7 inches tall and weighs 265 pounds. Stranger Lewis recently refused to meet Siegfried when Chairman Sullivan of the New York Athletic Commission stamped the foot on the Lewis-Brickley bout. Sullivan suggested that the German Oak would be a fit opponent for the champion. This decision caused Lewis to depart from New York.

Irish Champion Also to Display Wares

Jack McGrath, Irish champion and who has Lawson Pinkham as an opponent in another feature tussle, McGrath says he will display plenty of wrestling class.

The curtain raiser will bring together Frank Yusko, Lithuanian champion, and Justina Silvia, Portuguese title holder. This contest will be limited to 30 minutes. All other bouts will be to a finish.

NEW YORKERS TOO HEAVY FOR BROWN

Providence, April 12—New York University walloped Brown, 11 to 3 Toporcer's two home runs, with three men on bases each time, accounted for eight of New York's runs.

For five innings it was a pitchers' battle between Cornell, who made his debut with Brown, and Carlson and the Brown twirler had the advantage.

Cornell, who had fanned nine batters, was relieved by Leahy, but he failed to check New York, and in the eighth Toporcer came up again with three men on and hit to centre field for another home run.

Carlson pitched great ball for New York and held Brown to five hits. He was a homer by Hoffman with one man on base in the eighth.

The Lexington Golf Club is ready for the opening of the season on Patriots' Day with an all-day men's tournament over the club links in North Lexington.

W
30	Jack Conway, with twenty-nine straight winning selections to his credit, will try to keep up his sensational run of victories by naming the victors at tonight's great international wrestling carnival at the Boston Arena. Jack says:	7

"Wrestlers, like good race horses, have their good and bad days. But in the long run form tells. The fast steppers will usually win, all other things being equal.

"We figure that Calza's superior weight and strength will enable him to win over Kotsonaros. The latter is a better wrestler than Calza, but we do not believe he has enough pounds on his side to down the mighty Italian champion. This should be a bitter contest as a result of the animosity existing between the two men.

"Siegfried is our choice over Lobmayer. We think the German Oak also could trounce Stranger Lewis.

"Jack McGrath should win over Lawson Pinkham, while Stasiak is our selection against Parish.

"As the Yusko-Silvia match is limited to thirty minutes, it is a toss-up."

41 ENTERED FOR BOSTON'S BIG MARATHON

Only one more week and we shall have the twenty-seventh annual B. A. A. Ashland to Boston Marathon race.

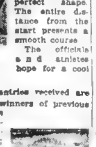
Already forty-one runners have sent in entries.

The roads from Ashland to Boston are in perfect shape. The entire distance from the start presents a smooth course.

The officials and athletes hope for a cool day.

Carl Linder

Among the entries received are those of three winners of previous runs. One is William J. Kennedy of Portchester, N. Y., a former Fordham star who will carry any man over the entire course once he gets his stride. The third is Carl W. A. Linder of Quincy who will represent the B. A. A.



Emilio Mollaro

Among the others entered are the two Hennigan brothers, Tommy and Jimmy, who will run under the colors of the Dorchester Club as will G. F. McAlpine and his son, Edgar McAlpine; Harold Goslin and George Costarakis.

Clarence DeMar smashed the record last year and every runner is ready to better his mark. It is believed by DeMar's many friends and those closely associated with the Marathon that the Melrose lad has a starter again.

Mollinari, an Italian youth, will win. He declares he was of Italy before he came a Pe Pees in Roxbury.

Macauley of Windsor, N. S., declares he will make a better mark than he did last Spring, when he finished fourth.

A Montevarde of Morristown, N. J., will celebrate his age of fifty-four by racing in the grind.

MIKE McTIGUE TO SAIL FOR U. S. MAY 1

Mike McTigue, the world's light heavyweight champion, is getting ready to sail for these shores. In a letter received by Pat Connolly Joe Jacobs the champion stated that he would leave Ireland on May 1. Over on the other side he is out every day on the road, keeping in shape, but has not been doing any boxing on account of an injured thumb.

McTigue requested his manager to try to arrange a fight to take place within two weeks after he steps on our shores. He is not concerned with the identity of his opponent.

Jacobs recently had a conference with "Tex" Rickard in relation to a Carpentier fight, and the promoter has repeatedly cabled Georges.

TOMMY NEE DRAWS WITH EDDIE POLO

Waterville, Me., April 12—Eddie Polo of Waterville fought Tommy Nee of Boston in a draw in a double six round bout. Nee had a slight advantage in the first six rounds, but Polo overcame that later. Johnny Russo of Springfield, Mass., won a decision over Jack O'Brien of Bangor.

72-Year-Old Jockey Wins Gov. Healy His First Bet

Dublin, April 12.—Timothy Healy, Governor-General of the Free State, visited the Punchestown race meet and placed the first bet he ever made upon a horse ridden by Harry Beasley, a 72-year-old jockey. Beasley's mount won.

CHICK SUGGS WINS BOUT WITH ELKINS

New Bedford, April 12.—Chick Suggs of Newport won his fourth battle from Charley Elkins of Boston at the Union A. A. He took every round of a ten-frame encounter in a walk. Elkins never once took the lead and was soundly booed for his lazy style and his occasional rough house.

Suggs tried hard to make a fight of it, but despite his efforts it was a very unsatisfactory exhibition.

MILLSTREAMS TO FIGHT FOR TWILIGHT FLAG

Among the new teams given places in the Greater Boston Twilight League is the Millstreams S. and A. Club of Chelsea, one of the most prominent organizations in the State.

Forty-five years ago this club was organized as a boat club and met with success in the regattas in those days. The organization later entered into baseball, football and other sports.

Last year the Millstream nine cleaned up all the best nines that played on the Chelsea diamonds and finished up the season by taking the series away from the Revere Knights of Columbus.

If we can't win the championship banner in our first start in the infant league, we can do as good as a lot of the clubs of 1922, says Manager Bob Steele.

The youths from the Clock City have a snappy nine, with "Hubby" Mulligan, Jack Simpson, Frank Zecha, Frankie Toomey and Frank Scully in the infield, and Tommy McElaney, Bill Sullivan, Babe Timmons and Joe Donavon in the outfield.

Tommy McElaney

The Millstreams will have a battery of a pitching staff with their reliable standby, Big Jim Haydock, Bullivan of last year's Neponset Wanderers, Slick Conley and Billie Steel of the Chelsea Knights of Columbus of a few years back.

On the receiving end will be Jack Pike, one of the greatest backstops ever turned out in Chelsea. He will get a day off once in a while as Tapsy Turner will fling on the pad and mask.

The home games of the Chelsea organization will be played on Merritt Park. When Mayor Quigley gets through with the plans of reconstruction it will be one of the best in Greater Boston.

Johnson Real Fighter, Says Noted Referee

Emerson W. Dickerson, one of the ablest boxing writers in America, was the referee of the no-decision bout between Floyd Johnson and Joe Lohman at Grand Rapids, Mich., last week.

In his paper, the Grand Rapids Herald, commenting on the fight and the order of the New York State Athletic Commission prohibiting Johnson from engaging in any more bouts before his fight with Willard for the Mills Fund on May 13, Dickerson says this:

"It is said they are afraid Johnson may fall down on the road and do not want to take any chances of that happening. They need have little fear on that score, however, as Floyd Johnson is a real fighter, with a fighter's heart.

"There was nothing about his fight here against Lohman to cause anyone to doubt his ability as a fighter of first quality as compared to any man in the heavyweight division outside of Dempsey.

"Besides being a fighter of great promise, Johnson is also a young man who bubbles over with personality of the most pleasing kind. Such men as he are an ornament to the profession. It is greatly to be regretted that he is not going to be allowed to get that which he is most in need of before battling Willard—EXPERIENCE."

ROBINSON AND McCREARY TO FIGHT

The Armory A. A. will stage a bang-up all star card at the Grand Opera House next Tuesday night.

Battling McCreary

Ivey Lewis, who is now making the matches for the Tribe A. has booked Battling McCreary of this city to clash with George Robinson, Dan bridge middleweight, in one of the ten-round contests.

This should be a furious battle. Robinson recently handed the latter a severe beating when he won over Lee Anderson, former world's colored light-heavyweight champion in his last Boston start. McCreary made Johnson show a surprise when he defeated Jack Taylor of New York.

Frankie Ryan

Another ten-round mill will feature Frankie Ryan of Everett and Johnny Fox of Winthrop. These boys are fast, clever boxers and stiff punchers, and should furnish a lively exhibition.

Matchmaker Lewis is expected to announce the rest of the card later today.

CHANCE MAY ELECT EAST BOSTON BOY AS PITCHING PET

FULLERTON SHAPES UP LIKE REGULAR FIND

By CHARLES E. PARKER.

Harrisburg, Pa., April 12—Curtis Fullerton, fresh from pinch pitching the ninth inning of the Red Sox's brilliant victory, 5 to 4, over the Indianapolis Indians, was to take the mound against the Reading, International Leaguers, here this afternoon. And whether his ebbe inning against the Indians and his neat six-hit triumph over Louisville a week ago were flashes in the pan or honest-to-goodness indications that Curt has arrived as a big league heaver will be more or less determined.

Curt looked like the much discussed million dollars when he let down the Louisville sluggers with six measly hits, for his fast one was working with a nice hop and his curve swerving most deceptively.

And against the strong Indianapolis combination for the brief space he toiled none could kick on his brand of stuff. Curt continues this afternoon that sort of stuff. Frank Chance has promised him a regular turn in the box, and that is for what every pitcher hopes and prays.

And because Curt [illegible] the only Boston owned [illegible] he is a heap of [illegible] Leaders him and are quoting [illegible] manager of the fine brand of [illegible] he has been offering

Johnny Mitchell, Utility Man, Banged in the Pinch

Curt was an important cog in the second victory over the Indians, but not quite so important [illegible] or two other of the young men Frank Chance so [illegible] loved.

To John Mitchell, utility fielder who served for the novice as pinch hitter, goes the big wad of glory.

Indianapolis took the field in the ninth inning with a 4 to 2 lead, and as an agreement had been made to call the game at 5 o'clock to enable the Boston club to catch a train, and that hour was drawing [illegible] it was essentially up to the Chance men to get busy early and often—and they did.

Slug Harris, First Man Up, Slapped a Single

Slug Harris, first man up, slapped a single [illegible] Bob McMillan beat out a hunt, and there were three on with none out. Howard Sankey, the next man [illegible] however hit into what would have been a double play. That enough enabled Harris to score, but forced McMillan. The Indian fielder dropped the throw from [illegible] ever, and enabled [illegible] third and Shanks first.

Chance then called upon [illegible] hitters. Skinner, the first [illegible] duced was called on [illegible] the second, drew a walk. [illegible] more filled the [illegible]

Then came Johnnie Mitchell. Johnnie lifted one [illegible] squarely in the centre of the [illegible] angle, whose apex was the centre fielder, and whose base was the Indian second baseman and shortstop, and the run that won crossed the dusty famous platter.

After Fewster had forced Schibler, Curt Fullerton sent to the mound and made the first two batters be them where the Red Sox infielders stood. He let up a bit on the Indian [illegible] batters, [illegible] [illegible] owed them [illegible] with [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

I. F. Williams, No. 113 Stoughton street, Dorchester:

"Got a letter from my home in Canada yesterday. Dad says the snow has been so deep all Winter that the hens didn't dare venture out of their stalls, and the old cow stuck right close to her coop. So he made the hens each a pair of stilts and they learned to manage them fine. He made good strong snowshoes for the cow, and she was so pleased she gave cream. Father sent me some snapshots but I lost them, so I enclose a drawing to give you an idea of how they look."

S. L. Abbott, Hingham:

Ever hear of a trained flea? A friend of mine had one once, which could do all sorts of tricks—sit up, roll over, stand on its head and so on. So famous did "Henry"—this was the flea's name—become, that my friend was engaged to exhibit his prize at a private party, quite a swell affair too, all the best people attending. After going through the more simple stunts, handsprings and so forth for quite some little while, my friend proceeded to pull his star attraction, which was for Henry to jump through a circle formed by his thumb and forefinger.

In his anxiety to have everything go O. K. my friend spoke more harshly than he meant and Henry being extremely temperamental and sensitive, jumped clean over the circle and on to the bare shoulders of a lady guest. After some difficulty Henry was captured and the trick began over. "Jump" said my friend. Not a move. "Jump" pleaded his trainer. Henry never moved a muscle. What ever could be the matter?

Thereupon my friend drew closer in order to better observe the flea's features and you can imagine the surprised audience when my friend announced, "Ladies and Gentlemen, there has been some mistake, this flea ain't my Henry at all."

Charles O'Donnell, No. 230 Huntington avenue, Boston:

"Before I came to the effete East, I had hunted the wild kelt lehs and the savage ch-haase in the mountains of the Hu-ka-don-tah reservation, chased the nimble such wil-ahs and the fleet cal-sash-ahs in the country of the Y'naks, but it was here in New England that I found the most peculiar animal of all.

"An animal that lives in the muddy bottoms of ponds and lakes and is captured by methods that are quite unusual. I refer to the whiffletail, which is hunted after midnight on a dark and rainy night when the moon is full and shining bright.

"You take a boat carrying with you a hammer, an extra large nail, an auger and a small piece of healthy cheese. Row you boat to the centre of the lake, nail it down to the water, using the hammer and nail, bore a hole through the bottom of the boat with the auger and on the edge of this hole lay the piece of cheese.

"Now that the trap is all set, you make a noise like a loon which arouses the whiffletail from his slumber. He whiffles a whif of the cheese and comes up to investigate and you wiggle him to death.

"Some people use jigger bait—but that's another story.

LECTURETTES

Consider the pastime of disguising oneself in an evening dress suit.

A hard boiled shirt is an excellent medium of official fingerprinting. Be sure and wash your hands in ink for sentimental reasons before trying to put the holes around the studs. Remember when massaging your collar that you can never tell how clean a collar really was until it's dirty. Little Willie's roller skates should be kept handy in case a collar button posse is organized.

Climb into your collar on top of a shoehorn and slip your shoes over your ears for comfort. Tie your tie very tight. Perhaps you'll be fortunate enough to choke to death and make someone else finish dressing you.

After you have tucked your scarf in your left and right ear and buttoned your hat to your lower lip you must see if you have your trousers on. It's bad luck not to wear pants to a party.

HOROSCOPES

According to the astral testimonies, this may be an auspicious day for those born under the sign of the bull. Throwing the same and boosting speculative interests bid fair to accomplish something one way or another. It is a day to keep the mind particularly alert for con artists. Jumping at conclusions is to be avoided and bears will bear watching. Beware of the person who offers to let you in on the ground floor through a back door, since there is a possibility of sub-cellar developments coming so suddenly as to take one off one's feet and get one's false teeth loose.

Toreadors matadors and brokadors will find it a time for considerable aggression diluted with caution. Wives with designs upon mates for new Spring suits may accomplish something by handing out a line of chatter of a laudatory and complimentary nature, thus drowning the Taurus of objection.

There is no doubt that the recent world brawl hit the social structure a terrible slam. And many modernistic ideas have gone into the discard, with more to follow.

Woman will never have to write a declaration of independence. She has spoken hers.

Some think more of the jingle of cash than they do of the harmony of souls.

I notice that those who don't dance are generally severe critics of that decadent art. The don'tdoits seem to be very strong now adays.

Blue laws certainly do make folks blue.

A girl at the office got her foot caught in those long skirts she was prancing around with and tumbled against a desk, marring the paint on her face. Served her right.

If I cut everything off my menu that somebody objects to I'll be in a class with those hunger strikers.

SOME FOLKS THINK

That ambrosia is darky moonshine.

That Marco Polo was the founder of the Polo Grounds.

That tin pan alley is a fancy name for the kitchen sink.

That button-ups are a new jangle among society folks.

That a porte cochere is a pre-Volstead drink.

"I will, sir," said the student, "if you will tell me whether I am supposed to be prosecuting attorney or counsel for the defendant."

Medbury Says—

By John P. Medbury

GARAGE rents are getting high. Until pretty soon it will only allow room for a Ford an automobile [illegible] owns the garage.

SEVERAL New York [illegible] charge two dollars and a for every twenty to [illegible] hours age. It would be a whole cheaper to pay some guy a salary to sit up all night with your car.

IF the rents keep going up business men will begin going to work on bicycles.

ONLY last week one guy sold his machine and started riding around in his children's baby buggy.

HE intends to go camping in the baby buggy this Summer and use a go-cart for a trailer.

HE doesn't know how long a trip he's going to take but he'd go as far as the chauffeur's feet last.

GARAGES are so crowded for space that they take the cars apart at night and put them together again in the morning.

ONE guy stored a Buick for the winter and when he took it out the next day it was a cross between a Saxon and a Studebaker.

WHEN he complained about it the garage man said what's the difference, they're all good cars.

HE had to store the automobile there for six months before he got his original machine back.

AND then he wouldn't have had it if he hadn't picked the parts off the shelf himself.

HE knew all about assembling —he used to help his wife get dressed for the theatre.

OF course he made mistakes, too. Once in a while he'd have an extra eyebrow and a couple of rosy cheeks left over.

SEVERAL times she forgot her natural blonde hair and he had to have it sent down by a Western Union messenger.

THE average man saves up his money for ten years in order to buy a machine and then he has to save up ten more to pay for a place to keep it.

THE Police Department won't let you keep your automobile out on the street all night. It won't be long before we'll have to rent an apartment just for the car and park ourselves on the curb.

THE UGLY DUCKLING

A Story of Two Sisters and What Happened at a Dance Given for the Fraternity to Which the Hero Belonged

By Ruth Logan

"IF the writer of that celebrated fairy story about the ugly duckling or Cinderella had been modern and working from real life, he would have found no [illegible] than the Danners [illegible]

"But you have to believe your eyes," said his mother. "Poor Avis always appears and acts like a downtrodden [illegible]

"She acts like the very devil incarnate sometimes," Pat Burke pounded his fist on the table. "If you ever get to know that family as I do you'll feel sorry for Lenore."

His mother was occupied with a seamstress that day and hastened away from her son.

"You know the Danners family, don't you, Miss Engers?" she asked of the woman bending over the sewing machine.

"Rather well. I do their sewing."

"Yes, and a joy it is to sew for Miss Lenore. Such a figure—such a skin."

"Her poor sister hasn't much looks, that's sure. Does she ever have nice clothes?"

"I just finished a dress for each of them, Mrs. Burke. The one I made for Lenore is a beauty; dark blue velvet with silver trimming. Miss Avis wanted a pink one. I tried to persuade her to go in for heavier materials, but she had her heart set on chiffon. Lenore hates chiffon and tried to talk her out of it, but chiffon Avis would have, with white kid slippers."

Three nights later Mr. and Mrs. Burke chaperoned a dance for their son's fraternity. Many beautiful young girls fluttered over the room in the embrace of the town's most young men.

"Is that Lenore Danners in blue velvet?" asked Mr Burke of his wife.

"Maybe Miss Engers did as she was to [illegible] Why, is that girl [illegible] with Pat's [illegible]

But before they could reach the couple the young people had left the room and were found out [illegible] to [illegible] the veranda.

Mr. and Mrs. Burke hesitated as they heard the sound of the voices in the semi-darkness. "I just can't dance. Pat. My feet are killing me. You see at the last minute Avis just wouldn't wear her own dress this hideous thing that I tried to talk her out of. I wanted her to come so I gave her mine. And she couldn't wear those awful white kid slippers with blue velvet and I changed—and I wear a size larger than she does—and"—a tearful gasp escaped the girl's lips and Pat put his arm about her

Mr. and Mrs. Burke withdrew and left them alone

Inside they found that the piano player had fainted.

"Who will play for us?" the dancers were crying

"Avis Danners will have to. She has taken music lessons all her life." The cry went up from one of the girls.

"I can't play without my music," said Avis stubbornly. "Get Lenore. She plays by ear."

Two of the boys sped away to find Lenore. They brought her back, wreathed in smiles. "For she's a jolly good fellow," they shouted. "Avis takes the lessons, but Lenore takes the cake. Three cheers for Lenore Danners."

Pat Burke sat beside his parents and watched Lenore at the piano. "She's a peach." he said to his mother.

"I think you are right, son. Your father and I were a bit hasty perhaps when we opposed your marriage to Lenore

WHEN A GIRL MARRIES

Tony Offers to Lend Anne Money If She Needs It After Paying the $10,000 Note, but She Declines His Assistance

By Ann Lisle

BETTY turned her head away. I felt puzzled for a moment. Then I decided that Tony had convinced her and she would go with us. But in a moment she cried wistfully:

"I can't go into—crowds—to parties. I want a—and—merrymaking. You don't ask me to go."

Tony's face was a study—pitying, uncertain.

"Let's have a chat, Lady Betty," he said, "while Anne gets her duds on. I'm driving her right to Carlotta's now. I want to be early."

And when I came out of my office to join him presently, he was talking most eagerly. At once we started out of the office in a silence that remained unbroken for the first minute or two of our drive. Then Tony cried out with a strange note of pity in his voice which I felt he must be carrying over from his interview with Betty.

Took Up the Note

"So you took up the note' I'd have been so proud to help. I could have secured you a three months' extension of time. Do you need the cash, Anne? I'd be the happiest of men to serve you—and Betty."

"I don't need it," I replied "You've stood by like a real pal, Tony—but I can go it on my own, now."

"I'll bet you can" cried Tony heartily. "And Betty's found herself through you and your business. I'd say she was—on her own. I'm proud of you, Anne. I'm all puffed up because you could do this—alone. I can't tell you how it makes me feel to see what a woman you are. I'd bet Jim was elated over your success—and your ability to take care of yourself."

Mercifully the car drew up at Carlotta's just at this point. So I was saved the agony of finding a reply.

Carlotta herself opened the door with a promptness that suggested she'd been peering through the drawing room windows in her eagerness for our arrival. She greeted us with a quality of tenderness which was very sweet and gracious. But her eyes were for Tony even when her hand was most warmly clasping mine. Drawing her fance from me, she smiled at me and asked suddenly:

"Where's the returned hero? I thought that was sort of in honor of Jim. Where's Hamlet—he must/n't be left out of his own play?"

"I'm afraid he can't come," I stammered.

But Carlotta dashed her words over the barrier of mine with an effort at playfulness

"And where's—your Betty?" she asked of Tony

But this time I flung myself into the breach I felt might so easily be created. As if it were to me Carlotta had spoken. I droned on

"Betty couldn't come either. She had an appointment with Miss May"

"To—made her feel we wanted her?" insisted Carlotta.

"Trust Anne," said Tony

Then Virginia and Phoebe and Pat and Neal arrived comig in a group of four as naturally as if this had always been. Whereupon Carlotta escorted her feminine cover upstairs while the men strolled into the drawing room. While we were taking off our coats and primping, Carlotta suddenly suggested:

"Anne—want to see your rooms? They've never been touched"——

There was a hint of pathos in her voice. I guess that she had a purpose to achieve

"May we go down to the boys asked Jeanie, "while you and Anne reminisce a bit? Then—unless I flatter myself all along the line—you needn't feel under any obligation to hurry!"

Carlotta Smiled

Carlotta smiled her acquiescence and hurried me into my old rooms with a breathlessness that flung out at once into words

"She'll be alone now You'll be leaving her for Jim as you—left me for her. Loneliness hurts anyone. It can hurt her worse even than it did me—I suppose. She'll need him more than ever."

I wanted to explain to this suddenly wistful Carlotta that my object in leaving her had been as much to make her loneliness patent to Tony as to cheer Betty's solitude. But I thought of a better thing to say to Carlotta. So I related how Tony, in urging Betty to come to the dinner, had told her that she must know "Carlotta—the best ever"

"Poor—" cried Carlotta, scepticially "That was friendship speaking."

ROYAL ROMANCES

HENRY II. AND ROSAMOND CLIFFORD

By Barbara Bayne

WHAT dreams of a love that ran the whole gamut of emotion, which, after more than 700 years, cling to the memory of Henry II. and Rosamond Clifford! Both young, brilliant with life, Henry, still a prince, entered privately into a marriage contract with the girl, who, unsuspecting, thought herself his wife

Shortly thereafter Henry accompanied his father, Geoffrey Plantagenet, to the court of Louis VII. of France, where he first met the girl Queen Eleanor, who had little regard for conjugal ties and a vast contempt for the pious king.

Henry was then only seventeen, but when he reigned two years later, a fine martial looking prince, ready for any enterprise of conquest, the Queen, though twelve years older, induced him to fall in love with her plans, promising the support of her great fleet of vessels and all the wealth of her own province of Aquitaine, if he would marry her. And she immediately proceeded to secure a divorce.

Motives of self interest impelled Henry to agree and on December 19, 1154, they were crowned King and Queen of England. Rosamond was virtually a prisoner, "a slave in golden chains," in the forest of Woodstock, and Henry's marriage and coronation were concealed from her. But it was more difficult to keep Rosamond's existence from the Queen. It was a dangerous game which added a fillip to Henry's desire to continue his left handed love affair. But suddenly, when he least expected it, Fate reached out, touched him on the shoulder and said, "Tag! You're IT!"

One day during their residence at Woodstock Castle, Eleanor observed her gallant young king walking in the garden. Some thing about his furtive air aroused her suspicions, and she followed, almost stepping upon a ball of flax, the end of which had become attached to Henry's spur. She traced the string to a dense thicket against the wall, beyond which lay the forest. There the king had mysteriously disappeared.

Curbing her curiosity Eleanor waited until Henry was safely away from Woodstock and then her investigations revealed a low door, cunningly concealed. It was the entrance to a subterranean passage which opened out into a sylvan spot in the heart of the adjacent forest.

There she found a magnificent lodge royally furnished and containing two stately little [illegible] Though Henry sacrificed his woman he really loved on the altar of self interest, he proudly acknowledged his sons, one of whom, named William Longespee, later loomed large on the English horizon.

Twenty long years behind grim convent walls, robed in the coarse garments of the penitent, her [illegible] of every earthly [illegible] was the fate Eleanor meted out to poor Rosamond.

As if to atone for the wrong Henry built a beautiful bower for her before the convent gate. During the turbulent times of the Reformation it was destroyed, but the stones hereby gathered up the dust of Rosamond in a purple bag of leather, and sealed it. Such care it was once more deposited before the high altar, where it had rested for four centuries.

YOUR BEAUTY

A FINE SERIES OF PRACTICAL VALUE

WE are often urged to try and try again in our efforts to reach a certain goal or attain a desired result. Yet sometimes the advice might well be added, "But don't try too hard." By this I mean that there are times when too strenuous physical efforts are more harmful than beneficial

Brushing the teeth is a case in point. To brush the teeth carefully and regularly is not only advisable, but necessary, if we wish to preserve their white and perfect beauty. Yet to scrub them with too much energy may do more harm than good.

A moderately soft brush with uneven bristles that penetrate into all corners of the teeth and gums is the best brush. The size depends upon your personal preference. Many persons prefer a small or youth's size brush because with it they can easily reach every corner of the mouth.

Brush your teeth, your gums and even your tongue and the roof of your mouth carefully but very gently with a good dentifrice. Cleanliness is the foundation of beauty.

THE ENEMIES OF WOMEN By BLASCO IBANEZ

Start Here Today This Engrossing Story of Life and Love from the Master Pen of One of the World's Greatest Novelists

By Vicente Blasco Ibanez,
Author of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" and Other Novels of World Renown

AFTER all, Michael reflected, our lives are nothing more than what we will them to be. We create life in our own image. It is useless for us to complain of Fate; we are what we want to be.

Yet Michael felt neither grief nor resentment toward Alicia now —only surprise that he could have hated Martinez and desired this woman with such vehemence.

He recalled with ironical sadness all the illusions, all the desires he had, in he past, concentrated on what was now—nothingness. His eyes rested on the diminutive foliage of the moss, the gaudy butterflies and a nameless tomb. A life which had considered itself superior to all others had left only this as record of its existence. Perhaps in the corolla of one of the little flowers there was something of Alicia's soul, which the butterflies sipped in their intoxicated flight above the tomb.

Springtime! The Prince recalled what he had seen in a corner of the world ruined by man's bestiality! Cities in ruins; villages that raised their walls only a yard above the soil, like cities which have been excavated after a cataclysm; barns set on fire; endless fields made sterile, torn apart and turned topsy-turvy by five years of bombardment; many graves—thousands of graves, millions of graves.

But the Winter-time of war was over, and now the Spring of Peace was here. The same hand, touching all things with green, put little flowers and butterflies on the nameless graves, hung fragrant garlands on the fire-blackened walls, spread a velvet carpet of emerald on the sides of the shell holes, made the birds warble and the insects stir above the tombs and guided the curling creepers over the black wood of the crosses as though trying to change them into thyrsi.

Alas! The earth knew nothing of our sorrows. The Prince came out of his abstraction and saw the Colonel greeting him from a distance.

Don Marcos was already back and with him Madame Toledo, whose head scarcely reached his shoulder. On the way she looked back several times.

The Colonel and his minx disappeared in the direction of the terraces and again Michael plunged into meditation. He recalled his talk with Don Marcos shortly before as they were descending from the cemetery.

Toledo seemed inconsolable. According to him the war had not ended properly. He appeared scandalized at the absurd manner of its conclusion. What terrible times these were!

A New Arrival.

Once more the Prince came out of his reverie. Somebody had stopped in front of him and he heard a well-known voice.

Your Highness, what a joy to see you! The Colonel has just told me of your arrival."

It was Spadoni—the name old Spadoni, as though he a few hours had gone by since his last interview with the Prince: as though it were only yesterday that he bellowed with indignation as he studied at the piano.

He didn't want to sit down; he was in a hurry; he came just to shake hands with his Highness. He would make a point of seeing him later when he had more time, in the Casino. He took it for granted that the Prince was going into the Casino. Where else could a decent person go in Monte Carlo?

He gave Lubimoff's uniform a rapid glance and admired his rough soldiery appearance.

"I have heard of the great deeds of your Highness. I always used to ask the Colonel about you...a hero!"

Lubimoff had scarcely time to shake his head at this praise.

Prince Michael listens to the duchess and the nurse

Spadoni started to talk about something more interesting. The war, heroes, and all that, were nebulous, meaningless things. He was for reality, and began to talk about a new personage whom he admired—a Portuguese who played big stakes and whose name, because of winnings, during the last few days, had been filling the gambling rooms.

"I am studying him; besides, he is a friend of mine, and I think I have his secret. Imagine, Prince. . . ."

The Prince Uneasy

The Prince grew uneasy, guessing that he was going to describe in all its details the combination of the Portuguese, which he already considered his own. But the pianist looked toward the Casino, stammered, and finally interrupted his account. Someone was coming, and he wanted to share his secret only with the Prince. He took his leave with the promise that some time he would reveal the precious combination.

Lubimoff thought of his life during the last few months, his adventures as a soldier, of his wound, of all that had happened to him and to the entire world, while that musician lived sedentary existence in Monte Carlo, admitting nothing as real, save the hovering flight of the Great Delusion.

His friend Lewis held out his hand to the Prince. It was he who, by his approach, had stopped the pianist's flow of eloquence. Gamblers, out of professional rivalry, avoid telling one another their secrets. Time, which seemed to have forgotten Spadoni, leaving him the same as when Michael last saw him, had left its claws on Lewis, making him older, as though months for him had been years.

Many Great Losses

He was sad because of the losses he had been suffering, and because of his memories. That niece of his was all the family he had! Lubimoff knew through the Colonel telling him of Lubimoff's arrival.

He avoided talking about his niece; he sank his patience in the sadness of all the past . . . Peace had surprised him. Who could have imagined it would come so soon, following immediately on the most anxious phase of the war?

The Count came to life at this query.

"Every one," said he. "The great soothsayers, the great ones, announced at the very beginning that the war would end in the Fall of 1918. It was well known to everybody. I have always said so. You have heard me say so many times yourself, Lewis."

A Bit Surprised

Lewis made a gesture of surprise. But he could not doubt the science of his learned friend, and preferred to admit that it was he who had forgotten. He had such a bad memory! Perhaps, even, he might have misunderstood. These guardians of a knowledge of the future never expressed their truths clearly; they refused to talk like ordinary mortals.

The conversation began to lag. The Englishman was thinking of the Casino. He was just going in when Don Marcos gave him the news of the Prince's arrival. This Count had just returned from a mysterious trip and had the devil's rosary safe in a certain pocket.

"Later on we shall see each other at the Casino. I suppose you'll come in for a moment. We'll see if luck treats me well today after such pleasant meetings."

Colonel that he had not inherited anything from her. The nurse had spent her entire fortune on ambulances and hospitals. Her title was the one thing that had gone to Lewis. His prophecy had come true; he was now the third Lord Lewis, surnamed "the worthless," the name he gave himself.

He gazed on the Prince for a long time, noticed the rigid arm and then shook his left hand effusively.

"You're a man, Lubimoff. You know how to do things."

And in these words there was a reproach for himself. Unable to tear himself away from Monte Carlo, he would live there and die there, doing the same things over and over.

Nevertheless, this was a great day for him. In the morning he had received a visit from a friend who was coming to live with him; he did not know for how long, perhaps for two days, perhaps for two years; a great friend from whom he had had no news, and whom he had often imagined dead—the Count, the famous Count.

He had come as far as the cafe with Lewis, who refused us be separated from him; he had shaken hands with the Prince as though he had seen him the day before, without noticing his uniform. He sat silently in a chair, running his hands through his white, curly hair, fixing a round eyes, with a nocturnal fire, on the people walking about the "Cameerbert."

Lewis believed he ought to feel happy. What a day of surprises it had been! First the Count, and then the Colonel telling him of Lubimoff's arrival.

He avoided talking about his niece; he sank his patience in the sadness of all the past . . . Peace had surprised him. Who could have imagined it would come so soon, following immediately on the most anxious phase of the war?

The Count came to life at this query.

"Every one," said he. "The great soothsayers, the great ones, announced at the very beginning that the war would end in the Fall of 1918. It was well known to everybody. I have always said so. You have heard me say so many times yourself, Lewis."

A Bit Surprised

Lewis made a gesture of surprise. But he could not doubt the science of his learned friend, and preferred to admit that it was he who had forgotten. He had such a bad memory! Perhaps, even, he might have misunderstood. These guardians of a knowledge of the future never expressed their truths clearly; they refused to talk like ordinary mortals.

The conversation began to lag. The Englishman was thinking of the Casino. He was just going in when Don Marcos gave him the news of the Prince's arrival. This Count had just returned from a mysterious trip and had the devil's rosary safe in a certain pocket.

"Later on we shall see each other at the Casino. I suppose you'll come in for a moment. We'll see if luck treats me well today after such pleasant meetings."

FOXY GRANDPA STORY

HOW BUNNY SERVED AN EGG

YOU said you thought you would starve to death before you had your supper. But you know you were going to get your supper, my dear. Suppose you weren't sure that you would get anything to eat! Then how would you feel?

Bobby, Bunny and I know. Once we were on the verge of starving to death.

It was in South Africa. We were visiting a friend of mine. He was a British army officer. You know that part of Africa belongs to England, don't you? Well, the English keep soldiers there, because the natives are often restless and sometimes rebellious.

My friend had a house near the barracks by the sea. But he also had a bungalow off in the jungle, where he used to go hunting once in a while. There's great hunting in Africa, elephants, lions and tigers by the thousands.

Well, we thought it would be nice to go off to this bungalow, so we went. But being such adventurous fellows, instead of staying around where we belonged, we thought we'd explore the surrounding country. That's where we were foolish.

Well, we started and tried to remember the way we went to be sure to be able to get back again. But all the paths began to look alike to us. And there we were wandering around like lost sheep.

We were pretty hungry that night, but we lay down and went to sleep. In the morning we were terribly hungry.

By the next night we were famished—almost too tired to walk.

Things were looking pretty serious. Bunny could eat berries, but some way berries didn't do Bobbie and me much good.

Finally, we were too weak to walk. But Bunny—bless his heart—was doing his best to find us some food. I didn't even have my gun along or I could have shot some game. So Bunny kept running around through the jungle to see if he couldn't possibly find us something to keep us from starving.

And his lucky feet saved the day as usual.

Late the third day when I was taking a nap, Bunny came running back from a thicket and with one bound landed on my stomach and shouted:

"Now, we're all right! Now we're fixed. Come along with me."

With a sigh I shook my head. Poor little Bobby was so hungry he couldn't walk, but Bunny's words made him smile a real smile. So Bunny told us to wait and he'd bring us something to eat.

We watched in the direction dear old Bunny dashed away. It seemed a long while until he returned. The minutes seemed hours. You know just like they do when you are waiting for dinner.

All of a sudden through the underbrush we heard Bunny. He was panting and struggling under a great load. What do you think he was carrying?

He looked for all the world like a real Easter rabbit—like the ones you see in the shop-windows. He was carrying a huge egg! An ostrich egg!

He had run through the thicket and there beyond was a beach, and in the sand was a nest of ostrich eggs. What luck!

Bobby and I didn't wait a minute, but broke that egg open and ate it. It was fine!

Soon we felt better and then we walked to the beach and ate some more.

It was lucky we found the beach, too, for we followed the shore line and came into the town where my soldier friend lived.

Always Room For More

Hal—Do you mind if I come over to your house for a while this afternoon?

Val—Not at all; we've got so much junk around already that a little more won't do any harm.

TELL THESE AT DINNER

The day after his first—and last—boxing match a sad and disappointed man hobbled off to see a doctor. His head was bandaged, his arm was in a sling, his face was a mass of court plaster, and he had borrowed a crutch.

"Hurt yourself?" asked the doctor.

The patient grunted. Of course, he'd hurt himself!

"Feel any pain?"

Feel any pain! The patient gave a second disgusted grunt. He couldn't feel anything else.

"Looks as though you've had an accident."

"Oh, no! replied the patient, finding his voice at last. "Not at all. "Then, perhaps," suggested the doctor, "you've been indulging in some rough sport?"

"That's it," said the patient; "I've been blowing bubbles."

DAILY HOROSCOPE
Mary Blake Says:

Today Lucky if You Avoid RISKS

TODAY is replete with adverse aspects and suggests extra caution in all affairs and restraint of any aggressive emotions in order to avoid conflict, strife and undesirable events. Avoid important matters and risks.

If born on this day you will be a great favorite with the opposite sex. You will be physically strong, but have no pronounced talent for any career.

There is a tendency in you to be melancholy and this trait which threatens to become disorderly and lead you astray. There will be much indecision, faulty judgment and a want of direction. If your ambition be once aroused, there is a sure reward, for there is plenty of ability. At the darkest moments success will often appear to come by mere chance.

Although you are frequently generous, you consider your own interests above all others.

WRETCHEDLY NERVOUS WOMAN

Was depressed and Irritable—Now well and always cheerful

"Some time ago I had a very serious nervous breakdown and became so weak, fretful, irritable and excitable that the least thing made me have the flutters and my limbs tremble as though I had a chill. I was utterly unable to control my emotions and a clap of thunder would make me shriek from terror. I finally became so depressed and discouraged that I sometimes felt actually ashamed of myself.

I began taking Wincarnis and after a very short time the improvement in me was marvellous. I really started living. Everyone commented on it. I'm sure Wincarnis is excellent. I always recommend it to my friends and have no hesitation in saying that every nervous or run-down woman should know what a wonderful tonic and restorative Wincarnis is."

CHANGE IN WEATHER

By GARRETT P. SERVISS
Eminent Astronomer and Authority on Subjects of Scientific Interest

MOST people like to know the causes of things even though knowing a cause may not furnish a remedy. For instance, many would like to know what caused last Winter so suddenly and so thoroughly to change its character in the middle of the holidays.

Until December 28, there had been no snow, except in the mountains and high northwest, and Christmas in the great cities as well as in the surrounding country, was a delightful day, with a mild Autumn temperature, and people began almost to forget the coal famine.

Then a wild snowstorm leaped upon the northern States, sweeping down from Canada, and millions of acres were covered with a vast, deep, snow-blanket. Now, if we take this later-holiday snowstorm as a point of departure, without troubling ourselves about its causes We should have plain sailing for an interesting theory about the severity and long-enduring persistence of the latter part of the past Winter.

This theory, if not directly stated, is at least strongly suggested by H. I. Baldwin of New Haven in the American Meteorological Society's bulletin. Here is the gist of it.

When a snow-cover of great depth has been established throughout the northeast, due to an exceptionally severe storm, such as that of December 28 (followed by another heavy fall on January 5) the effect is to keep the temperature of the atmosphere over the whole snow-buried region down near the freezing point, where it will remain until the sun becomes warm enough to melt off the great body of snow.

As long as the snow remains, cooling of the air by nocturnal radiation is intensified, and this helps to lower the temperature still further.

The vast mass of cold air thus accumulated becomes a persistent "high pressure area" standing over the snowy region, and such an area not only cools the country around it, and particularly toward the south, by the cold outflowing winds that it gives rise to, but it also deflects moving storms that are crossing the continent from the west and southwest, driving them southward of their normal track.

The result is that what would have been rain where the southern border of the cold area lies if the cold area were not there, becomes snow, and thus snows succeed snows as long as the great frozen field toward the north remains intact.

NERVOUS WOMAN COMPLETE WRECK

Tells How She Was Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Indianapolis, Ind.—"Now I want to tell you just what induced me to take your medicine. It seemed that I had to go to bed on account of weakness so that I could not carry a baby or attend to my household duties. The last time I was troubled this way I had a nervous breakdown and was a complete wreck. The doctor thought I would not live, and if I did that I would never be well and strong again. But I told them I was going to get well, that I was not going to die just then. My husband got me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took six bottles of it. I soon got strong again and had three more children. I have recommended the Vegetable Compound ever since, and if you could see me now you would think I had always been well."—Mrs. MARY F. HERRICK, 234 Detroit St., Indianapolis, Ind.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is an excellent medicine for expectant mothers and should be taken during the entire period. It has a general effect to strengthen and tone up the entire reproductive system, so that it may work in every respect effectually as nature intends.

FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

By B. C. Forbes

How are sons of rich men showing up in comparison with their fathers?

The popular impression is, of course, that rich men's sons rarely amount to much.

But is this really so?

True, it is unusual for a towering giant or genius to have a son of equally gigantic caliber. I doubt whether the sons of rich men, as a whole, do not make quite as creditable a business record as the majority of non-rich sons.

The only son of the richest man in the world admittedly isn't the business genius his father was, but young John D. Rockefeller applies himself more diligently to his daily duties than the average person, and has exhibited no little initiative and originality along lines which appeal to him most, namely, plans for improving the lot of the employes of Rockefeller companies and religious and philanthropic activities.

* * *

Henry Ford is now usually spoken of as the second richest man in the world. Those who know better declare that, like Edsel Ford is a quite exceptionally able young man, possessing as much vision and ambition as his father, and no less industrious and enthusiastic a worker. I am told, in fact, that Edsel understands financial matters very much better than his father.

* * *

Carnegie had no son. Schwab has no son. Gary has none. Eastman has none. Many other conspicuously prominent and rich men also are son-less.

* * *

The late J. P. Morgan, it is worth noting, was the son of a rich man who certainly did big things. Harriman's son, W. Averill, applies himself so intently to work that family reform becomes alarmed. Not only so, but young Harriman is exhibiting talents of a high order. It is quite within range of possibility that he will one day become as big a man in the steamship line in America as his father became in rail transportation. The second generation of Hill and Huntington certainly are not all ciphers.

* * *

What I really started out to talk about, however, was the showing being made by second and third generations in Chicago, a subject to which I recently referred in a way that caused a loyal second generation Chicagoan to drop in to see me in order to give me more information. He declared that the record of most—not all, of course—of the more prominent second and third generations there is far more creditable and impressive than the public probably realizes.

As a matter of fact, not a few of the men who now doubt a loom of the biggest things in Chicago are sons or grandsons of prominent forebears.

The Swift packing business, about the third largest enterprise in America, has been developed more by the second generation than it was by the original Swift. The same has been true of Armour & Company, and a third generation Armour—A. Watson Armour—grandson of the original Phil, is recognized as a real comer. A third generation McCormick—the third Cyrus—has a wonderfully fine record as today vice-president in charge of all the International Harvester's manufacturing activities in this country, Canada and Europe.

The dry goods house of Carson, Pirie, Scott & Company is in the hands of very capable second generation men. A. W. Harris, the banker, is the son of the founder of this notable financial firm. The gigantic McClurg Publishing business has largely developed by the present Ogden T. McClurg.

INFORMATION.

To I. L. H., Charlestown—Your hope of getting inside information from the officials will probably prove vain. There is no obligation to supply you with the facts you seek, and I regard this as most unfortunate. Many good investment stocks have been injured in the past and many worthless ones benefited in the future, by insiders using knowledge that belongs to stock holders in general or to buy or sell stocks to their own advantage. The introduction of an era of greater fairness to outsiders would be welcome.

I frequently happens that the insiders mentioned above are not even stockholders when given the news by the inner circle.

FAMOUS PLAYERS.

To L. S. S., Braintree—Famous Players-Lasky Corporation is the largest producer of motion pictures in the world. It owns and operates the Lasky Studio, at Hollywood, Cal., covering 400,000 square feet of floor space; the Wilshire-Paramount Studio, Los Angeles, Cal., and the Long Island Studio, Long Island City, N. Y. The companies' laboratories have a capacity of 100,000,000 feet of positive prints per annum. Its production, under the trade name of "Paramount Pictures," are shown in 15,000 theatres in the United States. Through affiliated companies it owns and operates the Rivoli, Rialto and Criterion theatres in New York City, and theatres outside.

The present concern was incorporated in New York in 1916, absorbing the Famous Players Film Company, and the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company. Its capitalization includes $9,270,000 8 per cent. cumulative preferred stock, and 228,203 shares of no par common. The company has no bonded debt. Book value of the common stock is about $87 a share, according to latest balance sheet.

The company made its best showing in 1920, when net earnings amounted to $8,321,240. The year ended December 31, 1918, was the least successful since earnings statements have been made public, net income in that year amounting to $1,281,18. Net earnings for 1923 were $4,110,948.

The preferred dividend of eight per cent. has been regularly paid since the stock was issued in 1920. The common gaid $10 a share in 1921, nothing in 1918, $5.50 in 1919, $8 in 1920 and since.

The preferred stock has sold as high as 107¾ in 1922, and as low as 66, in 1920. It is now quoted to yield over 8 per cent. The common has sold up to 123 in 1919 and as low as 40 in 1920. It is now selling to yield around 9 per cent. The Federal Trade Commission has filed a complaint against the company, alleging unfair competition and restraint of trade. In November, 1922, the Villagrah Company entered suit against Famous Players, claiming $6,600,000 damages for alleged suppression of competition in contravention of the Sherman act. Both these cases are still pending.

CAFES CLAMP DOWN DRY LID ON BROADWAY

By JOSEPH S. ROGERS.
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

New York, April 12.—With the surrender of a notorious rum-running crew, action by the New York Assembly to investigate charges of bootlegging graft by police officials of this city, confiscation of huge stocks of whiskey which Federal agents say was sold at 10 cents a drink and the arrest during the past week of a hundred men accused of driving automobiles while intoxicated, Broadway's night life has undergone a magician-like change. A tour of the cafes revealed the following:

1.—Increased cover charges due in the main to decreasing patronage.

2.—Increased orchestras and recruiting of stage artists coincident with new iron-clad regulations by managements positively forbidding the carrying of liquor into their establishments. Several cafes had inspectors who actually searched patrons for wet goods.

3.—Women waitresses forbidden to take tips.

It is obvious that cafes now realize that they can no longer wink at the law.

OFFENDERS DISCHARGED.

Waiters who have offended in the past by supplying patrons with liquor have been discharged by the score the past few days and in many instances have been supplanted with matronly women who, one of them told me, "Refuse tips because it is degrading."

Women taxi-drivers wait outside of the gilded palaces, catering especially to couples of their sex, who believing, and correctly, that cafes being practically dry, are free to enjoy night life without annoyance.

Cafe patronage is destined to undergo a change that would satisfy the strictest.

NEW AGE OF GAYETY.

The tired business man or the out-of-town buyer is destined to receive a shock if out for a "wild time."

Instead of seeing heavily Mascara-eyed women and diamond-studded men, he is apt to look upon his former school teacher enjoying a bottle-and-a-half of Evian, a member of the Anti-Saloon League.

For all signs point to cafes being a rendezvous for the intelligensia and those of conservative bent, rather than men and women anxious to revel in the delirium of gayety.

The one disturbing feature, however, situation is that prices instead of decreasing are increasing.

Cafe owners have summed up the situation in a nutshell as follows:

"There will be no place for the carelessly conducted cafes in the near future.

"With the total abstinence of liquor, a very new class must be catered to.

"The new police regulations must be enforced to the letter."

They believe that a hint to the wise—

Look for Daisy Drivers

Everyone Should Respond Generously to the Appeal of the American Legion Tomorrow and Saturday

The "Daisy Drivers" of the American Legion will canvass the streets and stores and the office and public buildings of every city in Massachusetts tomorrow and the next day.

Women who have seen service and are affiliated with the American Legion will compose this army of "Daisy Drivers," and they are very anxious to collect about $50,000, to be expended the next twelve months for the care and comfort of needy former service men and their families.

No one will be asked to contribute a cent. These young women will be decorated with a sash on which will be printed the words "American Legion." They will be generously supplied with artificial daisies. They will offer them for sale with the right hand and at the same time extend the left hand carrying a perforated pasteboard box into which anyone who cares to help raise a generous fund may drop their contribution.

The widow's mite will be acceptable if the widow can spare it. Larger sums are expected from those who are financially able to show material recognition of the services of our heroes.

Whatever is given to swell the welfare fund of the American Legion during this Daisy Drive may be deducted from the annual Federal income tax return. This should be an incentive to those who love to make income tax deductions.

Last year quick and imperatively needed aid was extended to thousands of veterans in temporary hard luck, more than 4,000 such cases being cared for through the State department headquarters alone. The money secured during the Daisy Drive is accounted for to the legion's executive committee to the last penny, but no public report is made of the names of those who are aided or the nature of the assistance they receive.

This work is not of the scientific and scrimped and iced variety of charity, nor is it financial assistance hedged about with red tape which would make of it finally more of a burden and a dread to the recipient than anything else.

This fund is expended in these times of peace in the same spirit of sacrifice and service with which buddy answered the call of buddy in the trenches. The Poppy is the national flower of the American Legion, the Daisy is the flower of appeal of the Massachusetts department.

So be on the watch tomorrow and the next day for the "Daisy Drivers" and meet them in the spirit of cordial and generous co-operation.

For Government and Priest

The Same Bullet. It Does Not Work That Way Always

Copyright, 1923, Star Company

Herbert Kaufman says of Monsignor Butchkavitch's execution: "Bolshevism stands beside Monsignor Butchkavitch and shares his death before a firing squad. The execution of a priest and the suicide of a government by the same bullet."

That it ought to be that way millions of earnest men believe, but it isn't so always.

"Truth forever on the scaffold, Wrong forever on the throne,"

is not quite accurate, fortunately. Truth gets down off of the scaffold eventually, and wrong is kicked off of the throne. But it takes time. Many thousands of Christians suffered under Marcus Aurelius. But he lived on, a glorious and happy Caesar, nearly sixty years, was more beloved by his subjects than any monarch that ever lived, and for his "meditations" is still honored as a great philosopher.

Providence is patient.

What is more important and menacing for the Soviet government than any individual injustice is news, via Switzerland, of a serious peasant rebellion against Bolshevism in South Russia. If the peasants TUEN, in spite of the free land given to them, then will be time to predict the downfall of Bolshevism.

It is built in a few very powerful minds at headquarters, and supported on the backs of millions of dull peasants that know only "We own the land NOW."

Lay on taxes too heavily, outrage beyond endurance their religious faith, and down will come the government.

Harvard Discrimination

We are very much pleased that Harvard is not going to attempt to discriminate on account of race, color or previous condition of servitude. It is, as the Harvard committee says, "Harvard's traditional attitude."

We are glad also that Freshman dormitories are to be opened to negroes admitted to Harvard. The discrimination was just as offensive in the case of the negroes as in the case of the Jews. In a democracy you cannot long bolster up a decadent blood by special privilege and you cannot long repress an ambitious, industrious blood by repression. The Jews are in an insignificant minority in this community. If they overrun Harvard, a college of the highest scholastic standards, they will be able to do so only because they have an ambition and industry which overcomes the great handicap of numbers and the other inherent advantages of a native population.

In our political democracy grafted upon the old laissez faire economic system, we cannot interrupt the law of the survival of the fittest. It is harsh and un-Christian, but it is the law which Christians prefer, and we must abide by it.

PETTICOATS ARE FANCY AGAIN

LONDON, April 12.—Petticoats, of many designs and hues, are fashionable again.

They are not, however, the rustling and befrilled wonders of Victorian days, but are so soft and slender that they can be drawn through the proverbial ring.

For many years, with skirts tight and short, petticoats were out of fashion.

This season they reappear in the glory of silk brocades, flowered crepe de chine and jazz satins.

Many are in bright colors, have bodices and might well be mistaken for simple evening frocks.

The main feature seems to be, however, the scalloped hem, which takes the place of the frisky frill of bygone days.

Tells Postal Delay

Editor Boston American:

Between 3 and 4 p. m. I took over to the main postoffice about 75 advertising circulars, going out under one cent postage. I turned them in at the receiving window, neatly piled, and naturally expected that those addressed for Boston delivery would reach destination not later than the following afternoon.

It is now two days later and I have just been in touch with several people to whom they were addressed here in Boston, and find this mail has not yet reached any of them.

Reasonably quick delivery of this class of matter is of the utmost importance to all business houses.

Are the business people alive to the real condition? If not, it might be well for them to test this class of delivery, and when they verify it to get action where it will do the most good.

Trolley Cars

Editor Boston American:

The papers tell of the Elevated buying new rolling stock. If that is so, why don't they replace some of the cripples they run on the Lake street Commonwealth avenue line?

It is getting to be a regular thing for many working people to stand twenty minutes to a half-hour waiting for a car to get to work.

One cold morning we enjoyed the usual lineup, without any effort by the Elevated people to advise people when the cars would be running again, or if the line is dying out like the old "Blue Hill Street Railway."

A jitney line operated from Allston street might help in improving the service. The patience of the people of this district is almost exhausted.

THE HELPING HAND

Do Not Inclose Stamps. Letters Will Not Be Answered Personally. No Attention Paid to Telephone Calls. No Names Are Published.

Kids Call Her "Rags"

Editor Helping Hand:

Will you please put my name, Elizabeth, in the paper and see if anyone will send me clothes, as my clothes are poor and the other kids call me "Rags." I am nine years old, and I have to wear my sister's shoes, and she is twelve, and when I walk they go up and down they are so big. My mama wrote you before, and you sent her a lady's name, but she only had clothes for my brother, age four. My mother has five children besides me, ages eight months, twelve, me, nine, and three boys, fourteen, four and six. They have some clothes, but need more. My mother goes out scrubbing at 2 o'clock in the morning, when we are all asleep, and I know you have lots of other little girls, only try and please remember me.

ELIZABETH R.

Crib and Mattress

Editor Helping Hand:

I have a crib and mattress I would gladly give to Mrs. J. D.

MRS. W. L. S.

ED. NOTE—She will be very grateful indeed. You will be put in touch with her.

Clothes for Baby

Editor Helping Hand:

Please send me the address of Mrs. P. H. and I will send her some baby clothes and some to make over for the older children. Will send a list later for some needy ones. Many of us are grateful to you for the knowledge of those who need what we have to spare, and these are deeds that "blesseth him that gives and him that takes." As a mother of eight children, no longer small and helpless, I have a tender thought for those who are suffering trials and deprivations and would like to pass on the many kindnesses I have received. Have you some very small old lady on your list to whom I could send some clothes—one who weighs less than 100 pounds and is four feet eight inches or about that?

AUNT CARRIE.

ED. NOTE—Mothers' hearts are softest. You will be sent Mrs. P. H.'s address and that of Elizabeth, as you request. I don't find any quite so little an old lady now, but maybe later. Thank you.

Well Supplied

Editor Helping Hand:

Although I have some things which may be useful to Anna, perhaps you can find someone else to help her, too. Our children are young and if you will send E. C.'s address we will try to help her. We might be able to help Elizabeth also. Yours for the good work.

MRS. W. L. D.

ED. NOTE—Several kind readers have rallied to Anna's aid, so that with what you gave I am sure she will be well supplied. The other two addresses you request will be sent you. Thank you.

Much Appreciated

Editor Helping Hand:

I have a silk dress, gingham dress and a good coat, size 18 to 20 years, and a pair of shoes, 5½.

MRS. R. A. R.

ED. NOTE—Thank you. These things will be greatly appreciated by Mrs. E. E. T., a young mother with a small baby who is struggling along on a slim income. She will be put in touch with you.

Offers Eggs

Editor Helping Hand:

I would like Mrs. J. C.'s address. I have a yarn rug partly done and have had to put it away until I felt I could buy yarn to finish it. We have been sick all Winter, and money goes for other things. I have a few ducks and a lot of eggs. I would gladly carry a dozen any time to some sick person if given their address. Also I would be glad to give a jar of jelly or jams to any person who was deserving.

MRS. B.

ED. NOTE—You will be sent Mrs. J. C.'s address. We shall remember your offers of eggs, etc., and we may find a place where they will come in mighty handy.

Husband a Vet

Editor Helping Hand:

I am eighteen years old. My husband is a disabled war veteran, who has been unable to go out much because of a gassed stomach. I worked as long as possible, but am expecting the stork soon. I must pay the debts we have and cannot afford to buy baby clothes. I would appreciate clothes for the baby, a bassinette and a few aprons for myself. I wear size 18. As we are living on a farm, my husband could wear overalls that some people no longer want. He is rather short and stout.

EIGHTEEN.

Dresses for Child

Editor Helping Hand:

I have a fairly good overcoat for a large man and some dresses for a three-and-a-half or four-year-old girl and a pair of girl's slippers, size 1.

L. M. R.

ED. NOTE—You will be put in touch with G. F. C., who needs the overcoat, and with Mrs. C. R., who has a girl three and a half. Thank you.

Aid From Sailor

Editor Helping Hand:

Please send the address of the girl who signs herself Elizabeth. I have a white middy blouse that I had in the navy, and which I never wore, and also a neckerchief. Being discharged, I don't think they ever will be of use to me. Hope you won't be offended by my offer.

SAILOR.

ED. NOTE—If Elizabeth is like most girls she will be very pleased to have a real sailor's middy blouse and neckerchief. Her address will be sent you. Many thanks.

This Is a Century That Doesn't Rest on Laurels

By Herbert Kaufman

ALMA CUMMINGS establishes still another record—fifty-four hours at the third attempt, which shows what can be done when folk really try.

One week ago she waltzed half that long and the news rang around the world. Records don't stay fixed nowadays. The twentieth century can't rest on laurels—it's too impatient to move along.

Cuno, Poincare and Bonar Law have no laurels to rest on. The job of straightening out Europe is too much for them. Every indication points to a change in cabinets at Paris, Berlin and London.

Other men, profiting by their misplays, may be able to bring understanding out of the Ruhr, but these three tired, heckled ministers have about exhausted their resources.

There's a limit to personal endurance even if there are no boundaries for relayed effort.

Individuals can only go so far. Alma Cummings will never dance for a hundred hours at a stretch.

Trained Germ-Hounds to Hunt Paresis

Adrenalin scores once more. This time a hypodermic injection resurrects an infant and keeps the child alive for six hours.

Doctors will soon do better than that. Medicine isn't resting on its laurels, either.

Dr. White, director of St. Elizabeth's Asylum at Washington, picks up the work of another pathologist and concludes his experiments.

The test tube becomes a kennel for trained germ-hounds. Carriers of one disease are introduced into the human system to hunt down and destroy more ferocious man-eaters.

Paresis finds a conqueror in malaria. No drug can penetrate the tissues in which the brain-destroying microbes are ensconced.

Inorganic curative matter is excluded from certain areas of the body by a filter, through which only the most minute organisms can pass. Malaria gets by. But, if Dr. White is on the right track, one widely prevalent source of insanity won't any longer.

A King's Daughter and a Cobbler's Son

Yolanda marries outside the sacred circle of royalty. Another precedent for Rome.

The most exclusive court in Europe bows to the spirit of new Italy and accepts a son-in-law from the lesser nobility.

Mussolini, self-educated cobbler's son, ex-vagabond, former Socialist and recent revolutionary, attends as notary of the Crown. One Premier who isn't losing his job.

Victor Emmanuel is King, but that young man is Caesar. The House of Savoy rules solely by a peasant's consent. The King knows it and shows it.

Puppet authority is preferable to a villa at Doorn—or Zita's poor castles in Spain. Sophie of Greece, eking out a shabby existence above Naples, is a nearer reminder of the parlous lot awaiting dictatorial monarchs.

Esau Sells International Birthrights

Madam Kalinen is barred from the United States. Public opinion, outraged at Russian impiety, supports Washington's stand.

Moscow has sold international birthrights for Red potage, and Esau must abide by the bitter bargain. There is no place in civilization for official priest killers. God's servants are still sacred and inviolate. Ostracism is the proper lot of barbarian governments.

Secretary Hughes justly refuses intercourse with Bolshevism, and Secretary Davis interprets national will when he excludes the First Lady of the Soviet Republic.

The Boundaries of Our Destiny

Cabinet members, however, are not such excellent interpreters when they plan to bring America through the back door of the League of Nations.

The world court has little popular backing hereabouts. The more we study Europe and the expense account of recent partnership in her affairs, the more certain it becomes that our destiny is bounded by the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans and the traditions of early statesmen.

No Samaritan was ever more roundly cuffed by his beneficiaries than we have been. These United States are without a continental friend.

Hate and envy have designed a Shylock's robe for Uncle Sam, and insolent ingrates, forgetting the millions of aged and children clothed and fed by our humanity, dare to suggest the cancellation of honest debts while they devote billions to imperialistic ambitions.

93 Years Old and Won't Believe It

Certain foreign powers would find a parallel for their attitude in the case of a Brooklyn mendicant who insisted upon community support while wearing diamonds. He explained to the court that he was too feeble to work.

Let him read of Joseph Sutton, who wrote a London newspaper objecting to a story which characterizes him as an old gentleman. Mr. Sutton is ninety-three and refuses to believe it. Neither do the balance sheets of his very successful business.

There's a man named Fanning up at Worcester with the same attitude of mind—another nonagenarian who keeps factory wheels moving at fever pitch. And the first wrinkle hasn't yet appeared in Dr. Eliot's writings.

Rust, not action, is the destroyer. Man withers in idleness—not office chairs.

Food Values Are Measured by Foot Rules

Experts calculate how many pounds of coal it takes to bring an orange from coast to coast. Food is largely worth its weight in fuel. Market baskets are filled with steam.

Thousands of miles often intervene national larders and iceboxes. Food values are measured by a foot rule.

Every knife and fork in the land cuts into a steel rail. The great terminal of transportation is the dinner plate.

President Loree of the Delaware & Hudson also does some cost accounting. He explains to his stockholders how recent strikes absorbed earnings and ate into reserves. The several red ink millions in his annual report show how much it costs to carry labor rows from month to month.
